NAPANEE SCHOOL BOARD

Napanee, Dec. 13th, 1920.

School Board met in regular session in the Council Chamber, Chairman Alpine Woods, presiding.

Members present—Messrs. P. Gleeson, Herbert Daly, Jas. Craig, G. A. Wetman, J. M. Thompson, J. L. Boyes, G. A. Thompson, E. J. Pollard.

The reading of the minutes of the last session were deferred in the absence of the secretary.

Mr. E. J. Pollard was appointed secretary pro-tem.

Mr. E. L. Fielding, Toronto, applied for a position on the teaching staff of the Collegiate Institute.

The Chairman reported that the Management Committee had engaged Mr. Fielding at a salary of $2000.00 per year.

On motion the action of the Management Committee was confirmed by the board.

An application from Misses Ross, O'Reilly, Baker and Gillard for an increase of salary from $1600.00 to $1800.00 per year, was received. On motion no action was taken.

An application was received from Miss Gillard for an increase of salary from $1500 to $1600 per year.

On motion Miss Gillard was granted an increase to $1600, dating from Sept. 1st, 1920.

The report of Inspector L. M. Lenan, re Collegiate Institute, was received and read and after some discussion the report was laid on the table for further discussion at the January session of the Board.

On motion of Messrs. Herbert Daly and Jas. Craig, the Management Committee were requested to inquire into the matter of changing the Collegiate Institute into a High School.

The matter of kalsomining the basement of the Collegiate Institute was refered to the Property Committee with power to act.

Principal McLean asked the Board for an increase of salary. Referred to Management Committee.

Rev. A. J. Wilson appeared before the Board on behalf of the Ministerial Association asking that a representative of the Association be allowed to address the pupils of the Collegiate Institute with the idea of placing before the pupils the question of entering the ministry as a life profession.

On motion the request was granted.

The following accounts were ordered paid :

McKay, school equip....	$ 7 20
Davy & Allison.....	15 65
Davy & Allison.....	2 25
Ginn & Co.....	2 97
E. Pringle.....	4 25
Napanee Express.....	2 15

The Chairman of the Property Committee reported that he had purchased fifty cords of wood at $11.50 a cord and two cords in loads of wood at $10.00 a cord on car at Napanee.

The quarterly report of the Public Schools was read and is as follows : Number on roll 444, average attendance 383.35, percentage of attendance 86.3, number in attendance under 7 years, 63, number in attendance over 14 years, 30, number of non-resident pupils, 23.

On motion the question of the caretaker of the Collegiate Institute was left in the hands of the Property Committee with power to act.

Board adjourned.

"THE NOON HOUR"

"Let me have sleeping accommodations on the train to Ottawa," said the agent at the window, who didn't seem at all concerned whether I took the trip or stayed at home.

"For a single passenger?" he finally said.

"No," I replied, "I'm married but I'm not taking anybody with me. A single shelf will answer."

"Upper or lower?" he asked.

"What's the difference?" I enquired.

"A difference of fifty cents," came the answer.

"Our prices to Ottawa are $2.50 and $3.00."

"You understand of course," said the agent, "the lower is higher than the upper. The higher price is for the lower berth. If you want it lower you'll have to go higher. We sell the upper lower than the lower. At didn't used to be so, but we found everybody wanted the lower. In other words the higher the fewer."

"Why do they all prefer the lower?" I broke in.

"On account of its convenience," he replied. "Most persons don't like the upper, although its lower, on account of being higher, and because when you occupy an upper you have to get up to go to bed, and then get down when you get up. I would advise you to take the lower, although its higher than the upper, for the reason I have stated, that the upper is lower than the lower because it is higher. You can save the lower if you pay higher ; but if you are willing to go higher it will be lower."

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
Dec. 15th, 1920

Council met in regular session, Mayor J. E. Robeson presiding.

Members present—Reeve Graham, and Councillors Boyes, Macgregor, Paul, Lewis, Ming and Roblin.

A communication from the Hydro Electric Railway Association re fees was ordered filed.

A communication from the town of Waterloo re motor vehicle fees with petition to government attached, was read. The memorial asks the government to pay over to the municipalities half of the fees collected from auto licenses. Filed.

The Fire Water and Light Committee asked further time to report re fire engine.

A communication from the County Clerk re Mrs. Alcombrack was read. No action taken.

The Market and Police Committee were given further time to report re overcoats for police.

A by-law to create a Utilities Commission to manage the town's waterworks system was read a first and second time, and will be read a third time if passed by the electors at the coming election.

A by-law to provide for the election of two members of the Public Utilities Commission was put through its various stages, signed, sealed, numbered and finally passed.

A by-law to appoint Deputy-Returning Officers, Poll Clerks, and places for holding the Municipal elections was put through its various stages and finally passed. Polling places and officers were appointed as follows :

West Ward 1—Frank Kinkley's, F. J. Vanalstine, J. T. Empey.

West Ward 2—Public Library, H. Lapum, Harry Vanalstine.

Centre Ward 1—Town Hall, J. M. Graham, Roy Moore.

Centre Ward 2—Wm. Schryver's residence, E. Walters, Geo. Mills.

East Ward—C. Switzer's store, R. S. Wales, E. W. Metcalf.

A by-law to raise $10,000 to meet the current expenditure of the town was put through its various stages and finally passed. The amount necessary to finance the town for the balance of the year will be about $6,000, and there is still about $4,000 of taxes uncollected.

Reeve Graham reported that the deputation to Toronto had settled the accounts between the town and the Hydro Electric Commission, and had delivered to the Commission the $5,000.00 of town bonds in payment for the lands purchased. The deed of the property was delivered to the town and registered.

Reeve Graham also reported in respect to the deputation to the Highways Department. The deputation did not meet the town in the amount the town requests the government to pay, and as the matter now stands it would be unwise for the town to proceed with the work next year unless the government would increase their proportion from 40 to 60 per cent. The estimated cost of the work is about $100,000 at the high prices paid for work last year. It may be built for considerable less.

The following resolution was presented :

Moved by Reeve Graham, and seconded by Coun. Paul, whereas Dundas street is a connecting link in the Provincial Highway as it passes through the town of Napanee.

And whereas the total length of said Dundas street from the easterly to westerly limits of the town is approximately 1¾ miles, and whereas the Municipal Council of the town of Napanee deem it necessary and advisable in the public interest to extend said Provincial Highway through the town on Dundas street, and to this end have had plans, specifications and estimates prepared for the construction of a permanent paved road by the engineering firm of A. James Co., Ltd.

And whereas the estimated cost of said work, consisting of storm sewers, curbs and gutters, excavation, asphalt top, concrete base and engineering charges is approximately $100,000.

And whereas the debenture debt of the town of Napanee is $176,-334.07 and the rate of taxation for the year 1920 is 40 mills, 25 mills of said rate being for general purposes, that being the limit authorized by statute.

And whereas, in consideration of the heavy debenture debt and high tax rate, it would be impossible for the town of Napanee to finance the said proposed street improvement without considerable financial assistance.

Therefore be it resolved that the Province of Ontario, through the Department of Public Works, be petitioned to assist the town of Napanee in constructing said proposed street improvement by undertaking to pay to the town of Napanee not less than 60 per cent of the cost of a 20 foot width road, said amount to be paid on completion of work and after the said work has been inspected and approved by the Department of Public Works, it being respectfully brought to the attention of the said department that it would be impossible for the town of Napanee to finance the proposed work without the full assistance from the Province as herein set out.

And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Department of Public Works, together with plans, specifications and estimates as prepared by the said E. A. James Co., Ltd.

THE BOARD OF COMMERCE BANQUET

Mr. Thos. Adams, of the Conservation Commission Talks to Napanee Business Men.

About two hundred business men and citizens of Napanee attended the banquet given by the town hall on Thursday evening last by the Napanee Board of Commerce. The banquet was given for the purpose of getting the citizens to-gether to discuss any matters which might be for the good of the community at large and to hear an address from Mr. Thos. Adams, of the Conservation Commission, Ottawa.

Mr. T. B. Wallace, President of the Board of Commerce, performed the duties of chairman to the satisfaction of the town audience. Suitable music and entertainment was also provided by Prof. Baird and an entertainer from Toronto.

Secretary G. P. Carr gave an interesting report of the work of the Board of Commerce since its formation about a year ago.

The By-laws of the Board were in course of preparation and would be in the hands of the members in a short time.

The Board was considering the advisability of holding two or more banquets a year in order to keep the members and citizens in touch with anything which might promote the general welfare of the town and surrounding country. The organization is as yet in its infancy and while it has not accomplished any big things it had done many things which were of benefit to the community and would be in the line of assistance rendered the town council in putting through the purchase of the waterworks plant and Mill site, also obtaining for the town and county better railway facilities from the Canadian National Railways. The principal reason for the continued existence of the Board of Commerce and its support by the citizens was not what it had already accomplished, but it furnished the equipment necessary to take immediate advantage of anything which might be of value to the community.

The speaker of the evening, Mr. Adams, gave a splendid address, which was highly appreciated.

He prepared his remarks by saying that it gave him much pleasure to come to Napanee and offer any advice in his power, or any aid the Commission could give, which might be of assistance to Napanee and the surrounding country. The people were entitled to know how the commission was operating and what service was rendered for the money spent and gave a short review of the various activities of the Conservation Commission.

The greatest asset to any community is health and prosperity, both moral and material. He stated that his business was to find fault with and point out wrong conditions, at the same time suggesting improvements but has seen very little to knock in Napanee. He thought, however, that the town was somewhat lax in the matter of providing a fitting approach to the town from the railway station. It looked like entering the town through a back yard. He hoped the citizens would see to it that this blot was removed when the new station should be built, making the entrance to the town worthy of the appearance of the rest of it. He urged the people to consider it their duty to make their town as attractive as possible and hoped that the land recently acquired on the sides of the river would be developed into a public park and connected by a suitable driveway with the county buildings. The site, with the falls is ideal for a small public park.

Discussing economic and industrial conditions which were facing us in the near future,, the speaker maintained that industrial work could be developed to much greater advantage and profit both to employer and employed in the smaller towns, if the housing problem could be overcome. In the cities the great distances employees have to travel to get to their work entails more strain than the day's work itself. It is better for the country to build a hundred Napanee's than one city. The speaker commended the town on the recent purchase of the waterworks system. No private company should control any public utility. He also complimented the town on its excellent sewerage system and the magnificent it has to offer in the matter of railway facilities, power and healthful living conditions.

W. S. Herrington, K. C., introduced a motion asking that the meeting appoint a committee to consider ways and means for the erection in Napanee of a hall suitable for holding public meetings. The present hall has long since become inadequate for any such purpose and never was properly constructed for the purpose. A properly constructed meeting hall would fill a long felt want and could be of a memorial nature as a tribute to the boys who came from the country who fell overseas. The resolution was seconded by Rev. J. H. Coleman.

The motion was carried unanimously and the chairman will name a committee to look into the matter and report.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker of the evening and the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

He Got a Meal.

A city man tells of an incident at a railway junction in the back country. He was hungry and it was only two minutes before the departure of his train. He rushed up to the counterman and exclaimed: "Give me a sandwich and a cup of coffee, quick! Haven't time for anything else." "My friend," said the man behind the counter, "take all the time you want. Just cast your eye over this menu and I'll phone the superintendent to hold the train a while." "Do you mean to say that he will actually hold the train while I eat?" "Sure. This is a branch road, and there's no other train coming or going until to-morrow morning. The superintendent will want you to have a good meal—he owns this lunchroom."

Eskimo Jazz.

A sergeant of the Canadian Mounted Police, who recently returned to Ottawa from Tree river, asserts that the jazz craze has reached the Eskimo population of the villages in the north of the patrol. At the most recently opened police post on the shore of Coronation gulf, the Eskimos are busy sealing, but manage to get sufficient leisure to indulge in the terpsichorean art, which is immensely popular and for which they have erected a special igloo of commodious proportions.

IMMIGRATION IS BARRED

Europeans Have Been Flocking Over to Canada.

So Many Foreigners Cannot Be Cared For In the Dominion, and Even New Citizens From British Isles Are Unwelcome at the Present Time as Unemployment Has Become a Serious Problem.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—A difficult immigration situation has resulted from the attempted invasion of Canada and the United States by thousands of refugees from Central and Eastern Europe. As the United States the movement has become so alarming that Congress has taken it up. Some action on the part of the Canadian Parliament may be found necessary at the coming session unless it is found that the present law and regulations are sufficient to control the situation.

During the past few days the Minister of Immigration has received a number of telegrams from many parts of Canada, most of which are to the following effect:

"Jewish citizens of —— strongly urge that Jewish immigrants now in port be allowed to remain in Canada. Jews of means will deliver to government bonds covering any required amount guaranteeing that no Jews permitted to enter Canada within specified time will become public charges during any specified period. To deport these immigrants back to the horrors from which they escaped would be a crime against humanity."

Officials of the Immigration Department state that people from Central and Eastern Europe are arriving at Canadian ports despite repeated warnings and advice given to all parties concerned. Since the outbreak of the war all publicity in continental European countries has ceased, and nothing has been made to discourage the movement in question.

Booking agents and steamship companies know the law, but they persist in sending these people forward, knowing that in a great many instances they are not entitled to land in Canada. When these people are debarred entry the steamship companies must defray their living expenses and carry them to the port from which they sailed free of charge.

In administering the law the department is trying to act alike, regardless of race or creed, and to permit these people to land, contrary to regulations, would, the officials feel, imply undue favoritism to some at a time when the Federal, Provincial and Municipal Governments here are already facing a serious unemployment situation.

"While refusal to permit these people to land may cause hardship and inconvenience," says a statement issued Saturday, "the department holds the view that any criticism to be made in this connection should be directed against those responsible for creating the hardship resulting. The department has ample evidence of the efforts of interested parties, without the authority of the department or the transportation companies, are carrying on an active propaganda in certain European countries with a view to making money out of these distressed people.

"During recent months, owing to approaching labor conditions in Canada, every effort has been made to discourage emigration from the British Isles, except in the case of persons going to relatives, or unless they have ample means to tide them over a considerable period of time. Quite recently the money qualification had been raised to $250 per head. In the face of this restriction the department cannot credits way clear to relax its regulation in favor of emigrants from Europe, who would be seeking immediate employment, thus aggravating a situation that is daily growing worse. The offer of employment to those people is not considered sufficient in view of the fact that there are now thousands of people in Canada, including returned soldiers, who are seeking employment."

Madero's Slayer Suicides.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Dec. 14.—According to a despatch received here Sunday from Guatemala, Francisco Cardenas, formerly a general in the Mexican army and the man who assassinated President Madero and Vice-President Pino Suarez in Mexico City on the night of February 22, 1913, committed suicide in Guatemala City on November 11. It is reported that he blew his brains out with a pistol.

Cardenas has been having a hard time recently hiding himself from the strong arm of the new Mexican Government, and it is said that the new extradition arrangement recently effected between Mexico and some of the Central American republics was framed particularly for the purpose of bringing Cardenas and several other exiles to Mexico for punishment.

Riots In Bucharest.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, is under martial law, according to an official announcement at the Roumanian Legation here late Sunday night. This step was a result of disorders in the city which culminated on Thursday in the explosion of a time bomb beneath the Speaker's Tribune, in the Roumanian Senate. The infernal machine was set to explode soon after the Senate opened its daily session. Bishop Radou, a member of the Senate, was killed, and Gen. Coanda, President of the Assembly; M. Gradisteano, Minister of Justice; Senator Bishop Mifon and two other members of the body were among the wounded.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Cure was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Cure is what produces such wonderful results in catarrhal conditions. Send for testimonials free.

Trouble began by the hurling of a bomb at a police lorry which was on its way from Dillon's Cross Barracks to the city. When the terrific explosion wrecked the lorry the bodies of fourteen "Black and Tans" were strewn in the roadway. The torn and bleeding bodies were carried into shops and houses and thence to the infirmary, where one died during the night. Eleven of the men are in a serious condition, and it was in the district of the explosion where the fires first began.

Grant's large drygoods store, employing hundreds, was set alight. Owing to repeated attacks that had been made upon the fire brigade when they had attempted to extinguish such outbreaks, firemen did not dare venture into the streets and the flames were allowed to consume buildings after buildings.

Further down on Patrick street, Cork's principal thoroughfare, Egan's jewelry store, the largest in South Ireland, was broken into and all kinds of valuable gems removed. Shops alongside were fired, the raiders sprinkling the premises with petrol, burning rapidly, house after house igniting, and soon the whole block was involved, including the large Irish drygoods house outside of Dublin.

The flames from there ignited the next block, every building burning down in both sides and as a result the entire heart of the city was gutted.

In Patrick street the fronts of these blocks were reduced to ruins. Those who have viewed the ruins of Grant's drapery store declare that it is hardly possible that the raiders themselves as the whole front of the building was blown into the street.

All the buildings from Cook to Winthrop street were burned out, this area embracing a dozen large premises which run from Patrick street. Black Abbey, which runs off Patrick street is also demolished, as well as the strip from Maylor to Merchant street. The Cash Company's large drapery store and the entire front wall blown into the street, completely blocking traffic.

The Palace Theatre in King street, Cinema Hall in Winthrop street were destroyed.

It is not improbable that fives have been lost in the fires; already several persons connected with the destroyed houses and business premises are reported missing.

At four o'clock Sunday afternoon people were just beginning to venture again into the streets; the whole city was then in control of the military and it is understood that the officer in command assured the populace that the military would remain on duty indefinitely to prevent further destruction. The city was in full fighting order, pickets with machine guns being posted at all vantage points.

A deputation of citizens of Cork, including the Protestant bishop and the town clerk, waited on the officer commanding the troops and requested him to take measures to prevent a recurrence of the appalling damage to property. He promises to send out patrols early in the day.

The destroyed city hall in Cork was only excelled in point of size in Ireland by Belfast's great civic building. This was the third time it had been set on fire, the firemen being driven out at the point of revolvers. On the two previous occasions, the west wing, devoted to the public health department, was burned, but no mistake was made this time, the hall being set alight in many places. The great hall, seating 3,000, and possessing a fine organ, shared the same fate as the municipal premises.

The fact that no serious casualties were caused by the bombs is explained by the statement that preliminary warning was given to all occupants of buildings to leave prior to the attacks.

The injured were taken to the Receiving Hospital and to the Children's Free Hospital. Walter Yanicki told Inspector Jackson of the police traffic squad that he did not see the approaching car when he started to cross the tracks.

CORK LIES IN RUINS

Irish City Almost Completely Wiped Out.

It Is Believed That Fire Resulted From the Throwing of Incendiary Bombs at the Police by Sinn Feiners — Millions of Dollars' Worth of Property Destroyed, Including City Hall and Library.

CORK, Dec. 14.—The central portion of the city of Cork has been burned to the ground. The Municipal Buildings, the Carnegie Library and the Corn Exchange, which cover a large area, have been consumed by the flames. In fact the whole business part of the city has been practically destroyed. Over 139 houses and large shops have gone up in flames.

The situation grew so bad that the Dublin firemen were called out especially to save what part of the city could be saved. The firemen of the entire city of Dublin were called and were told that unless they could check the entire city of Cork would be wiped out.

Shortly after six o'clock Saturday, however, the fires were gotten under control. The total damage will exceed $25,000,000.

The fires extended to St. Patrick's street from Cook street to Maylor street, and swept entire rows of buildings on both sides of Winthrop street, leading from St. Patrick's street to Old George's street.

Trouble began by the hurling of a bomb at a police lorry which was on its way from Dillon's Cross Barracks to the city. LARGE FRENCH DEMANDS.

Will Ask For Forty-Six Billion Dollars From Germany.

PARIS, Dec. 14. — From highest sources it is learned that the French delegates to the financial conference left for Brussels Sunday, instructed to inform Germany that the French reparations bill is forty-six billion dollars, as security for which France will demand specifically a first mortgage on all the largest German industrial plants and all German Government receipts and customs.

If Germany fails in payment France will not only seize control of German finances by the above means, but will invade the Ruhr coal mining district.

The French policy for the first time since the signature of the peace treaty has taken a definite stand. The delegates to Brussels are ordered to insist upon the following program:

1. The reparations total not named must be agreed to by Germany without argument.

2. Germany may be entitled to more than $5,000,000,000 by an international loan guaranteed by the Allies, which loan, it is hoped, will be placed in the United States.

3. Germany must not undertake to float any loan without the consent of the Allies.

4. No financial operations of any kind must be inaugurated by Germany in any foreign market.

5. Germany may pay portions of the reparations bill in raw materials on a sold basis.

GOVERNOR PRIOR DEAD.

He Was Formerly Premier of British Columbia.

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 14. — His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Edward Gawler Prior, who succumbed Monday morning, after an illness of five weeks' duration, was taken ill with the occurrence of an old internal trouble, while attending the exhibition of tennis given in the drill hall by the American champions, and his condition subsequently became so aggravated as to necessitate his entering the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

A week ago he suffered a relapse and on Saturday morning underwent a major operation from which he failed to rally, his condition having been extremely low, the thirty-six hours preceding his death.

Edward Gawley Prior was a Yorkshireman, born at Dalloweghill, near Ripon, and was educated at Leeds Grammar school. He was a mining engineer, and came to Canada in 1874, settling at Nanaimo, Vancouver Island. Later he became head of a big hardware business. He was Premier of British Columbia for seven months in 1902-3. He also commanded the Bisley team from Canada in 1890 and was twice president of the Dominion Artillery Association.

Three Vacancies Now.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—The death of Lieutenant-Governor Prior creates the third gubernatorial vacancy. The other two—Saskatchewan and Alberta—are created by expiration of term. Col. Prior was appointed July on December 9, 1919.

"STUNG" BY GERMANS.

American Business Men Thought Goods Were Cheap.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—Several American business men, who when the value of the mark was only one cent a year ago were "stung" by buying freight, are back here with tales of woe. Many of them claim that they were "done" by the German merchants, they paid out hundreds of dollars of marks and ordered everything from ordinary pins to automobiles de luxe. They went to any amount of trouble to get export licenses and some of them even bribed officials to get the goods out of Germany without paying the fancy duties provided by law.

"Buying up cheap things in Germany does not necessarily mean saving money and making large profits," said the buyer of one New York importing house to-day. "Our consignments were a long time in arriving and when they did come half of them were not what we had bought. But I have learned a lesson and I am here now to buy only non-perishable goods which must be shipped after our inspection to be paid for on delivery in the United States."

The presence of large numbers of American buyers is regarded here as an indication that there will be a new slump in the value of the mark in this month and January.

Want Our Lumber.

If building and other improvements are to be carried out in New Zealand in connection with the next few years, large quantities of material must be procured from Canada and the west coast of the United States. With this object in view, a large corporation has been organized in New Zealand and has sent a representative to this country to arrange for a supply of lumber.

It is claimed that this Dominion within the next two or three years would require 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 feet of lumber from Canada and the United States, and possibly this might be repeated during the next five or six years, for there must be a large amount of construction work done in order to meet the demands of the rapid development in different sections of the country.

The Whale's Oil Tank.

In the upper portion of the head the whale has an immense oil tank in which the valuable "spermaceti" is found in a liquid condition, and which is said to be dipped out with a bucket when an incision has been made. From a sperm whale sixty feet in length as many barrels of spermaceti have been taken out of the "case" and the surrounding fat. The sperm whale is the animal which yields ambergris, the valuable substance used so extensively in the manufacture of our best perfumes. Ambergris is only found in "sick" whales—that is, its presence is not normal, but is caused by a pathological condition of the intestines.

New Explosive.

South Africa is now manufacturing a new material to take the place of nitroglycerine explosives. It has been tested in mines and is regarded as both strong and safe. It is called sengite, the first syllable being derived from the initial letters of the words, "substitute explosive, no glycerin."

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 14.—Receipts at the Union Yards yesterday were 142 cars—Cattle 2,648, calves 132, hogs 1,222, sheep 1,409.

The run of 2,500 cattle on the opening market was a big one, while not a large one, was heavier than was expected at the Union Stock Yards immediately after the Fat Stock Show. It was all cleaned up. There were quite a few good loads of baby beeves left in the run, and these were quickly picked up at good prices. The top price of "baby beeves" sold from $12 to $14 a hundredweight, and, while this price is higher than has been prevailing it is not nearly as high as was paid for this class of animal a year ago. Prices held about steady for choice heavy butcher cattle, but trade in common and medium stock was slow at prices which were unchanged. Choice cows sold as high as $11, but the stocker and feeder trade was dull and inactive.

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 14.—Cattle—Receipts, 400; 5 loads; steers, 25c to 50c lower. Shipping steers, $12 to $13; butcher steers, $8 to $11.75; yearlings, $13 to $14; heifers, $5.50 to $10; cows, $2.50 to $7.50; bulls, $5 to $8; stockers and feeders, $5.50 to $7.50; fresh cows and springers, $50 to $120.

Calves—Receipts, 1,000, steady; $4 to $16.

Hogs—Receipts, 20,000; 15c to 25c lower. Heavy, $10.50; mixed, $10.50 to $10.60; yorkers, $10.50 to $10.60; pigs, $10.50; roughs, $8.50 to $9; stags, $4 to $6.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 12,000; steady. Lambs, $6 to $15; yearlings, $8.50 to $12; wethers, $9 to $10; ewes, $2 to $6; mixed sheep, $5 to $5.50.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Hogs—Receipts, 27,000; beef and butchers' cattle, 25c to 50c lower, but ending 25c to 50c higher; yearlings, $13.75; good heavy steers, $13.50; bulk, $12.50 to $13.50; canners steady to 25c lower, mostly $3.50 to $3.75; bologna bulls, steady; good and choice, $5.50 to $6; light bulls lower; practical top, $10; bulk, $9 to $9.50; calves, steady to 50c lower, 25c to 50c lower. Hogs—Receipts, 53,000; generally 25c to 40c lower, top, $11.25; bulk, 25c lower, closing on the bottom. Top one load, $9.65; bulk, $9.25 to $9.50; pigs, steady to 15c lower; bulk desirable, 90 to 130 pound pigs, $9.25 to $9.50.

Sheep—Receipts, 18,000; practically all killing classes 25c to 50c higher; one deck fancy native lambs, city butcher, $12.30; big packers paid $12.25 to $12.30 for westerns; bulk, $12 to $12; top yearlings, $10.50; one load aged wethers, $6.90; one load choice heavy fat ewes, $5.75; others mostly $4.00 to $5; no feeders sold up to noon.

Died at Age of 114.

DETROIT, Dec. 14. — Abraham Kittle, who was born when the population of all Michigan was less than 4,000, died Saturday afternoon at the age of 114 years, at his home, 388 Greenwood avenue.

Kittle was born fourteen years before the first steamship crossed the Atlantic. He preceded the telegraph and the cable and the Monroe Doctrine. The passenger train service was not opened in the United States until 1828, and then Abraham Kittle was 22 years old.

Kittle probably was the oldest Mason in the United States.

Missing Man Found In Texas.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—John T. Hamill, president of Murphy-Gamble, Ltd., one of the city's largest department stores, who has been missing for upward of five weeks, is at Fort Worth, Texas.

Information to this effect is contained in a letter from Hamill to his family here. It is said he is in poor health.

A country-wide search has been conducted for Hamill since he left his office shortly before the lunch hour on November 11 and mysteriously disappeared.

Turks Fail to Get Loan.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 14.—The Turkish Government has not yet succeeded in consummating a loan for the purpose of paying the arrears in salaries of officials. Two-thirds of these officials are deserting their offices because they are not even able to pay railroad and street car fares. The efforts of the Government to obtain credit have failed up to the present, owing to the refusal of the Allies to grant financial assistance so long as the treaty remains unratified.

Earth Tremors In Argentina.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 14.—Earthquake tremors were distinctly felt in many parts of Argentina Sunday, after midnight Friday morning, and reports from points as far south as Patagonia show they shock was perceptible.

Plot to Blow Up Viaduct.

LONDON, Dec. 14. — The Lancashire police are investigating what is suspected of being an attempt on Saturday night by Sinn Fein sympathizers to blow up the Braidhurst viaduct spanning Calderwater, near Motherwell, and over which the main railway line from England passes. After the explosion a large hole was found at the foot of one of the piers of the viaduct, which was only slightly damaged.

Greek Destroyer Lost.

ATHENS, Dec. 15.—The Greek destroyer Navarinon, was foundered in the Mediterranean near the island of Melos Monday. The crew were saved.

MILLIONS KILLED IN ACTION

Wonderful news! Millions and millions of germs killed in action and thousands and thousands of victims relieved of bronchitis, asthma, coughs, and colds. There is great rejoicing in the fact that science has at last invented the world's surest death trap for germs—Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. With the first dose this remedy gets right down to business, and never ceases in its destructive work till every trace of the disease is completely removed and the victim restored to normal health. Letters from all parts of Canada praising this wonderful mixture are literally pouring into headquarters. Read this letter:—"Years of suffering from that terrible affliction, bronchial asthma, ordered by all medical men to close my business in Montreal and go south to a warmer climate, I finished your ad. in the "Montreal Standard" for the above mixture and I said I would give one more trial to health before I leave my native town, and thank the good maker I did. My bronchial tubes are clear, the hacking cough has disappeared, the wheezing cough has ceased as if by magic, and all discomforts have gone since taking your wonderful mixture."—Herbert Corri, 417 McKay Street, Montreal. There is no reason whatever why you cannot be completely and healthily restored to health if you take this remedy. You are satisfied or the money is refunded, according to our guarantee. Don't delay. An Historic Cemetery Reclaimed.

The Niagara-on-the-Lake correspondent of the St. Catharines Standard has furnished his paper with an interesting account of the reclamation work done at Butler's Burying Ground. Until recently a neglected spot, sacred to many families which bore a worthy part in the war of 1812-14, was badly neglected. The grave stones were in disorder and the whole place overgrown with weeds—a dismal spot which by its very existence seemed to rebuke an ungrateful country.

Butler's Burying Ground was so-called after the Col. Butler who raised "Butler's Rangers," one of the most famous regiments on the British side in the hundred-year-old war with the United States. Time after time the Niagara Historical Society, of which Miss Janet Carnochan is the head, endeavored to procure action on the part of the Government, looking to the restoration of the burying grounds. A few years ago the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park Commission went so far as to inclose the graves with a fence. About a year ago, the commission, of which Mr. P. W. Ellis is the virile and aggressive chairman, decided to take this ancient cemetery in hand and put it in decent condition. Capt. Jas. R. Bond, magistrate and superintendent of Park Commission, visited the scene and laid out his plans for the work of reclamation.

With the skill of a landscape gardener, Capt. Bond has converted the little cemetery into a pretty, well-kept park, with smooth greensward, neatly gravelled paths, concrete seats for the use of visitors, and a drive road leading from the lake shore highway. The ancient vault has been restored and the slabs from the old tombs laid in seemly rows.

DOUKHOBORS IN B.C.

THIS STRANGE COMMUNITY IS NOT POPULAR.

Object to Having Their Children Educated as Canadian Citizens—They Have Also Clashed With the Contractors and the Leaders of Labor Movements, Who Do Not Want Low Wages.

Now that the Doukhobor colony in the Kootenay Valley has made some concession to the British Columbia officials, to the extent of sending to the provincial schools some fifteen or twenty children out of their population of four or five thousand, a sigh of relief has gone up from the English-speaking population in the district, and the hope is expressed that some day, by the long, slow process of time, this hitherto aloof portion of the province will become Canadianised. At least there is a strong feeling that the thin edge of the wedge of Canadianism has been inserted between the Doukhobor and his former determination to stand apart as a separate clique within a nation. A lot has been said against the Doukhobor colony in the Kootenay district, which colony is an offshoot from the Saskatchewan settlement, and which migrated to this centre some years ago when the pressure of the Middle Western settlement became too strong; and while sentiment in lower British Columbia is swinging just a trifle in his direction, the average citizen in this locality, if asked about the Doukhobor, will declare that he is no good as a citizen. By that, the people mean that the colony is still standing with its face against Canadianization. They declare that the Douks will not mix, that their colony is too self-contained; still, a little enquiry has failed to find any Canadian who is really keen to break the circle by marrying one of them.

But in spite of a steadfast stand against Canadianism, the wedge has been called upon in the form of the public school. It is not that the Doukhobors take kindly to the schools provided by the province, for they do not. The recent experience of a young lady teacher who dared the task of turning the light of Canadianism into the youthful minds of the colony will show how the wedge works; and how the Doukhobors regard it. For six straight months the young lady journeyed daily to her school at the edge of the colony, and though she rang the bell at fixed intervals, there was not a single child to pass through the door in search for knowledge. Then she tried another policy. She visited the homes and gradually won the confidence of a few of the parents until in time she had a small list of youngsters on her register, who attended more or less regularly. Ask a Nelson or a Grand Forks citizen why he doesn't like the Doukhobors and the chances are he will reply, "They won't send their children to school," but now that the school wedge is in, there is a stronger feeling of tolerance. No one seems to know why the fathers of the colony object so strongly to the children having a Canadian education, though the universal opinion is that they do not want the young to become too enlightened as to Canadian ways, for fear they will break away from the community control.

They have their own form of teaching, confined almost entirely to their own language, with a few of the sons of the more prominent men taught enough English to let them carry on business with the Canadian citizen. The idea seems to be the correct one, for in other respects care is taken to keep the colony from coming into too close contact with the public. That is shown in the manner in which contracts are carried out on any big jobs which fall to the lot of the settlement take with the Canadians. When it is necessary to send gangs of men on a job, while the Doukhobor's community spirit induces him to do on the slightest provocation, these gangs mix with the English-speaking people for a few days only at a time, being replaced at regular intervals by other gangs. The result of that policy is that while the Doukhobor is ready to snatch up what business comes his way, the colony as a whole does not get lifted out of its non-Canadian rut. That also brands him as "not a good citizen."

The farming here is mostly fruit and vegetable growing, and while the colony builds up a big surplus over its own wants, practically all of that surplus goes to the other colonies in the Middle West. But whenever there is a bit of fruit left over for the canning factories in the Kootenay district the canners never have to complain of the price asked. Some say that the Doukhobor fruit and vegetable prices show that they are not money-grabbers, but others are less charitable.

Contractors have learned that the settlement does not think in as high terms as do the balance of contract seekers, and they shift much of this work to the colony, and since the Doukhobor army of workmen is driven to the jobs in squads, it is evident that the chiefs of the colony can carry on their contract work at low cost and can continue to aggravate the ordinary Canadian contractor, who is faced with the problem of the five-dollar-a-day workman and the six-dollar mechanic.

The Doukhobors are credited with intense honesty when it comes to the handling of those contracts. There are even stories told of the frank manner in which they will tear up contracts, to their own disadvantage, the moment the contract giver complains that he cannot afford to pay the amount agreed upon. After that comes a new contract, at a lower figure. This spirit, while popularizing the colony with a few, does not make them beloved by labor as a whole.

Ever Read the "Wawa"?

With a circulation of nearly 4,000 copies a week, and an advertising revenue which many more important newspapers might envy, the Kamloops Wawa, a journal printed entirely in shorthand, and circulating among the Red Indians of British Columbia, may claim to be the most curious newspaper in the world, says Tit-Bits.

A sixteen-page paper, it was started by a French-Canadian priest who, while engaged in missionary enterprise among the Kaiyuh Indians, hit on the idea of furthering his work by printing the Gospels and distributing the leaflet form to members of the tribe.

Before he could do so, however, it was necessary to teach the Indians the characters in which the leaflets were to be printed, since their own language was too difficult to set down on paper. Shorthand was chosen as being the simplest method.

From this modest beginning sprang the newspaper, the arrival of which is eagerly awaited by the tribesmen.

Want to Raise Sunken Treasure

It has been stated—and it is probably true—that more money has been expended in efforts to reclaim sunken treasure than the total value of the wealth sought for.

Many fruitless endeavors have been made and described from time to time, but special interest, from both an historical and a practical point of view, attaches to the operations now in progress in Tobermory Bay, Isle of Mull, Scotland.

After the dispersal of the Spanish Armada in the English Channel in 1588, one of the surviving galleons put into Tobermory Bay for revictualling and repairs.

According to the state papers of Scotland, there were good reasons for believing that the bulk of the Armada's wealth had been transferred to this ship, and that this wealth included the crowns for the coronation of Philip II. of Spain as king of England, in the event of a British defeat.

As the result of a gunpowder explosion on board, the galleon caught fire and sank in ten fathoms of water about eighty yards from the shore.

After numerous unsuccessful attempts to salve her, the "Armada Galleon Syndicate" was formed, with Lieut.-Col. Mackenzie Foss, a man of great experience in deep-sea diving, as director of operations. Col. Foss finally adopted a new method of clearing away the sand and clay into which the galleon had sunk to a depth of some thirty feet, and before the war he had actually succeeded in recovering a number of the cargo. Interrupted by the war, operations were suspended until the spring of 1919, when they were resumed and carried on with great success.

Then, with the prize almost within his grasp, Col. Foss met with an accident that again postponed operations. A powerful water-jet, which was a principal feature of his salvage plant, struck him and knocked him down, resulting in a serious injury.

The plant employed by Col. Foss in the first instance consisted of a salvage lighter moored over the site of the wreck, from which an ordinary boring plant was worked—by means of a pile-driver. This boring plant, however, proved unsuccessful, owing to the difficulty of maintaining the lighter steady during swells, and to the fact that the boring rods and tubes were frequently bent in consequence. Subsequently a "grab," worked by a winch from the staging, was used. The clay was excavated from the bed and lifted into a screen, where it was sluiced for the purpose of securing "finds."

By this means many interesting objects have been salved, including coins, silver cups, and even bottles of port wine that had been lying in the wreck for more than three hundred years.

Unfortunately much damage was was done. For this reason the use of the grab was discontinued, and Col. Foss then had recourse to a different method.

A monitor was employed, by means of which a water-jet, delivering sixty pounds of water a second at a pressure of one hundred and twenty-five pounds to the square inch, was provided. Deducting a water-pressure of, say, forty pounds a square inch, at the depth of the galleon, there is provided a jet with a working pressure of eighty-five pounds a square inch, by means of which divers were enabled to remove the clay from the ship.

The divers descended by a ladder, carrying the water-jet nozzles with them, and at a given signal water-pressure was turned on. Telephonic communication was maintained between the divers and those in charge above water.

The silver articles and some pure gold buttons, apparently from the dress of some notable person, were recovered from what is believed to be the stern of the ship, while pewter plates and bronze coins were recovered from the crew's quarters.

The oak hull of the galleon is in a good state of preservation, having been protected by the clay in which it has been embedded for more than three centuries.

Miss Margaret Naylor, secretary to Col. Foss, has taken an active part in the work, having descended in diver's equipment to the wreck.

Apart from the great value of the treasure which it is believed the galleon contains, writes P. J. Risdon, in the Popular Science Monthly, its recovery after three hundred and thirty-two years would constitute an historical event and a feat of great perseverance.

SENSATIONAL SPEECHES.

Sir Andrew Macphail Reads Industrialism a Lecture.

The Canadian Bar Association owes its origin and rapid growth chiefly to the fostering care of Sir James Aikins, who, being impressed with the utility of the American Bar Association, has devoted his energies to creating a parallel organization in Canada. At the recent meeting held in Ottawa, two very sensational addresses were delivered which will have echoes up and down the land for some time to come.

Mr. W. E. Raney, the Attorney-General of Ontario, in moving a vote of thanks to Lord Cave seized the opportunity to condemn the main reasons urging this change: firstly, it is quite inconsistent with our new status full national status that Canadian courts should not be good enough to interpret laws made by Canadian legislatures; and, secondly, the latter sense of Privy Council appeals imposes an unfair handicap upon poorer litigants and often forces inequitable settlements. Mr. Raney's daring venture was backed up by Mr. W. D. Gregory and received support from an unexpected quarter in Mr. R. B. Bennett. Naturally the Attorney-General brought down upon his head the stern disapproval of most of the delegates, though he probably reflects the opinion of a large majority of the general public. Sir James Aikins and other leading legal lights were obviously pained, but wisely held their peace and it was left to Mr. Hartley Dewart to make common cause with an unbending Tory, Mr. White of Pembroke, in expressing angry horror at what they considered the disloyal and improper proposals of the Attorney-General.

But if Mr. Raney behaved with impropriety, his crime paled its ineffectual fires beside the misdeeds of Sir Auckland Geddes. In Britain Sir Auckland is classified as a Tory and an Ambassador is supposed to have no political or economic opinions. But to the astonished association he delivered a speech which had a flavor of earnest radicalism, and while it gained him many fresh admirers, lost him some of his old ones. Consider the irony of the situation. Here has the Labor Department been spending funds on pamphlets seeking to prove that the country is overburdened with Bolshevist agitation. And now along comes Sir Auckland and tells his audience in eulogistic terms that denunciation of agitators is about as profitable a pastime as swatting mosquitoes, and that just as malaria cannot be got rid of until the swampy pools in which the mosquitoes breed are drained, so industrial unrest will cease when all industry is humanized and intelligent and drastic readjustments of the existing system come to pass. He also brushed aside the theory that industrial unrest is merely a temporary aftermath of the war and will soon subside. Sir Auckland knows better. He gave a moving account of his discoveries as Director of Recruiting in Britain, which apparently made him a reformer. Without undue emphasis he pointed out how he found on every side terrible evidence of the evil effects of unbridled industrialism, the physical ill-being of millions, the ghastly overcrowding, the destruction of home life and the reduction to mental stupor produced by the multitude by the dull task of minding soulless machines. His measured indictment of industrialism will not accord to him an early invitation to address the C. M. A. in session. But his speech made a deep impression upon the audience. He spoke with a Calvinistic force and sincerity and obviously has not only thought deeply and clearly upon all current problems but has evidently given himself complete freedom of utterance when the opportunity to strike a shrewd blow for sane progress offers.

IMMIGRATION.

Trade Will Not Flow Strongly For Over a Year.

Probably a year, or slightly more than a year, will elapse before the movement from Great Britain to Canada reaches any large proportions, in the opinion of Hon. James A. Calder, Minister of Immigration and Colonization. Mr. Calder, who has returned to Ottawa, after an official trip to England and Scotland, finds that shipping conditions are at present operating to restrict the movement. Many of the Canadian immigration agents overseas have instructions to take every precaution to see that no more people emigrate to the Dominion than can at present be absorbed.

They advise persons not likely to find employment within a reasonable time of their arrival in Canada to defer their departure from England. Shipping space is at a premium, and the penalties to which they are liable for bringing unsuitable persons to the Dominion, are careful to scrutinize applicants for passages. In consequence, Mr. Calder asserts that Canada is securing a better and more suitable class of new citizens than ever before.

The shipping situation, however, prevents any immediate increase in the volume of immigration. Mr. Calder interviewed officials of the North Atlantic shipping conference, and was informed that accommodation on vessels coming to Canada was booked for about a year. In so far as the outlook for immigration in the future is concerned, it will depend a good deal upon economic conditions in Great Britain. For instance, Mr. Calder states that there is at present almost as great a shortage of domestic servants in England as in Canada. Women, who were trained in domestic service, found employment in industry during the war. They are only gradually leaving that field and returning to domestic service. The Minister of Immigration, however, found in Great Britain a feeling that a fairly serious unemployment situation might develop there in the near future. Such a condition would tend to drive people to seek homes and livelihoods in other countries. It has been variously estimated, moreover, Mr. Calder points out, that Great Britain has a surplus population after pre-war days of from 600,000 to 1,200,000. Before the war 250,000 people left Britain every year. At the same time, having regard to the shipping situation, Mr. Calder inclined to the view that immigration would not reach even large numbers for probably a year, or until the spring of 1922.

THE NIGHTINGALE.

English Sweet Singer Is a Fearless Bird.

A nightingale in a little village not far from London once reminded a field naturalist in a striking manner of the fallacy of the belief that all wild creatures are constantly afraid of attack from powerful enemies. A bird will see the deadliest enemy of its kind, says Mr. W. H. Hudson, who describes the incident in his book "Birds in Town and Village," and unless it be so close as actually to threaten its life it will regard the enemy with indifference or mere anger.

"It happened to be raining — a warm rain without wind. I heard a nightingale in a narrow lane and went toward it softly in order not to frighten it away. It sat on a dead projecting twig of a low thorn-tree only about five feet above the ground of the lane. There was this nightingale singing in the rain, seeing but not heeding me, while beneath the bright, almost directly under the twig it sat on, a black cat was watching it with luminous yellow eyes. I did not see the cat at first, but I have no doubt that the nightingale knew that it was there. High up on the tops of the thorn were a couple of sparrows.

"After at least five minutes, one of the two sparrows dropped from its perch straight down and, alighting on the ground directly under the nightingale, began busily pecking at something. No sooner had it begun pecking than out leaped the concealed cat. The sparrow fluttered wildly up from beneath or between the cat's claws and escaped as if by a miracle. Then, quick as thought, the cat rose by, sprang back into the hedge and was gone. Meanwhile, the exposed nightingale, perched only five feet above the spot where the sparrow had so nearly lost its life, continued to sing for some minutes after. It would, perhaps, have continued singing just the same if the sparrow had been caught and instantly killed."

Lord Lytton Has Become

New Secretary for India

Born in Southern England

Lord Lytton, just appointed Under-Secretary of State for India in the place of Lord Sinha, can boast, like the latter, of being a native of that great Oriental empire, though not of such a dusky hue, writes La Marquise de Fontenoy, in the Philadelphia Ledger. For he was born in 1876 at the Viceregal hill station of Simla, not very long after his father, the late earl, so widely known in literature under the pen name of "Owen Meredith," had taken up his duties as Governor-General of India. Indeed, Lord Lytton's childhood was spent between Simla and Calcutta. He should do well as Under-Secretary of State at Whitehall, where it may be hoped that he will serve as a wholesome check to the pernicious activities of the Rt. Hon. Edwin Montagu, the Secretary of State for India, who has completely demoralized the British Civil Service of that great dependency, in his efforts to introduce a totally impracticable scheme of autonomous government at Delhi, which the native Nationalist leaders themselves have been quick to repudiate and to flout.

Lord Lytton has considerable administrative experience. He has been Civil Lord of the Admiralty and its Parliamentary Secretary; also British Minister for Propaganda in France, and one of the representatives of the British Empire at the Peace Conference of Versailles and of Paris. Curiously enough, his wife, the former Pamela Plowden, is famous as a beauty at the time of her debut in London, was also born in India, where her father, the late Sir Trevor Plowden, was one of the most eminent members of the judiciary, and where her mother succumbed to a snake bite. Lord Lytton has inherited much, but not all, of the literary ability of his father, the poet "Owen Meredith"; also of his grandfather, the novelist, Edward Lytton, first Lord Lytton, author of a long series of works, among the best known of which are perhaps "The Last of the Barons" and "The Last Days of Pompeii." For he has written an altogether remarkable biography of his maternal grandfather of his, who has been the subject of so much slander, thanks to the calumnies of his malignant crazy wife. Indeed, the present Lord Lytton's "Life" of his grandfather is a complete and satisfactory vindication of that peer.

Archeology Lord Lytton is devoted to sport and has many hair-raising stunts to his record on the tobogan slides of Davost and of Wengern, in Switzerland. In appearance he is somewhat effeminate. For he wears his hair long, is addicted to an esthetic style of dress and lives chiefly on rice and nuts, being not only a strict vegetarian, but also an earnest disciple of the cult of Pletcherism, which requires the chewing of each mouthful of food some two score times before swallowing. He is also a connoisseur of art and has championed the cause of oppressed washerwomen in the House of Lords, being himself a stickler for starched linen and cuffs and collars. Needless to add that he is a godson of Queen Victoria.

Lord Lytton makes his home at Knebworth Park, one of the most interesting places in Hertfordshire, and which has been in the possession of the Lytton family since the days of King Henry VII., when Sir Robert Lytton removed to build the present mansion on high ground in a fine wooded park on the site of a stronghold that dated back to the days of the Norman Conquest. The mansion thus begun by Sir Robert Lytton, treasurer of the household of Henry VII., was completed by his successors, and Queen Elizabeth stayed there on several occasions, the bedroom which she occupied remaining with the bed and furniture, absolutely unchanged.

At a later date the mansion was permitted to fall into a good deal of disrepair, but was restored and put into its present condition by Elizabeth Lytton, the last of the line of Lyttons, who married Gen. William Bulfer, of Dalling. She had three sons—William, who inherited his father's property and who is represented by the Bulwers of Heydon in Norfolkshire; Henry, who married the niece of the first Duke of Wellington, entered the diplomatic service, spent seven years at Washington as British Envoy to the United States and died without issue as Lord Dalling.

The third son, Edward, was the famous novelist and his mother's favorite son. It was he who inherited her estate of Knebworth Park, and who, with the consent of the crown, assumed, at her instance, the name and the armorial bearings of the ancient Lytton family. For his services as Secretary of State for the Colonies he was raised to the peerage as first Lord Lytton. His only son and successor died as Ambassador to France, after having served a term as Viceguy of India, and was succeeded by the Earldom of Lytton. His eldest son, in turn, is the present earl, whose younger brother is the Hon. Neville Lytton, for some time master of ceremonies at Buckingham, badly wounded as a member of the general staff in France during the great war, and married to Judith Blount, now, as Lady Blunt, a peeress in her own right through inheritance. Let me add that Lady Wentworth is a great-granddaughter, and (save for her three young children) the sole living legitimate descendant of the poet Lord Byron. For the latter's only child, Augusta Ada, to whom so many of his beautiful verses were addressed, was the mother of the late Lady Anne Blunt, who was in her turn the mother of the present Lady Wentworth.

A Dinner at Metz.

In his latest book, "Memories of a Marine," Sir George Aston, the veteran sailor who has been a pioneer in assisting to develop the defence ideas which proved triumphantly successful during the last five years, describes a dinner on the battlefields of 1870-1, and incidentally gives an account of a dinner at Metz.

"For the last two days of the tour," he says, "we put up at hotels in Metz, and on our last night we were invited to dine with the German cavalry regiment in the town. It was an experience which at my present age I should be sorry to repeat. We sat down to dinner at 5.30 p.m. and rose from the table at 11.30 p.m. My neighbor was a German officer who had sat on my left wing literally under the table. I had read in novels about people going under the table at dinner, but this was the first it happen, and on this occasion I confess that I did not notice his disappearance because I was talking to my other neighbor; when I turned round the convivial one had silently slipped away, and I did not realize where he had gone for some minutes.

"It was not considered a regular drinking evening, so we were let off lightly. Only twenty-seven sent-round formal messages that they wished to drink with each of us, but I believe that sometimes every officer used to do so, and on such nast had to be drunk with no heel-taps; you had to reverse your glass after drinking to show that you had done so. My neighbor on the other side was most interesting, he had ridden in Bredow's charge at Mars-la-Tour, which is claimed that about 600 cavalry put a hostile army corps out of action. The disappearance of my left-hand neighbor called my attention to my own wine glasses, of which there were at least six, intended for various liquors; one was full of excellent champagne, one of champagne, and another of beer.

"When the party broke up most of them were under the table or else to finish the evening, but some of us succeeded in getting away to bed."

ON CANADIAN CITIES.

English Newspaperman Writes About Toronto.

Douglas Newton is another writer who has been telling Britishers and others about Toronto. Like Mr. Newton was one of the newspapermen who accompanied the Prince of Wales.

He says Toronto doesn't lack names, and lists "The Boston of Canada," "the second city of Canada," and the "Queen City," and mentions the smiling, exclusive residential districts of Rosedale and the Hill, and Yonge street stretching for forty miles. He refers to Rosedale streets as "capricious." Surprisingly, he refers to the streets of the commercial section as not only compact and practical, but "wide." He was evidently comparing them with the Strand and Fleet street, not with Kingsway.

He wonders why Toronto adopts as well as others here, always use the longer instead of the shorter word—"automobile" for "car"; "elevator" for "lift."

Referring to the location of the Parliament Buildings and the University of Toronto, Newton says Canadians always show artistic sense in the grouping of their public buildings. Toronto University and, more especially McGill, have indeed splendid sites. Oxford is one of the most charming places in the whole world, but it is the quadrangles and gardens of the colleges that are spacious, not the location of the buildings themselves, usually built to the street line as they are.

Newton gives a new name to the architecture of the Ontario Parliament Buildings, a problem that has baffled all local critics. Renaissance—"Railway Station Style" is his appellation. And he is an Englishman, with a dismal Euston and Waterloo in his mind, not the glories of the Grand Central and Pennsylvania terminals. He also had before him the example of the old Toronto Union Station.

The City Hall he describes as "a vast edifice of raw stone from which it bists a campanile."

The new General Hospital aroused his enthusiasm. "Canadians have advanced to the sense of luxury, when they constructed it. They refused to give it the appearance of a morgue, as is done so often elsewhere with hospitals and schools.

He calls the Exhibition the "rendezvous for the whole of Ontario, perhaps also for the whole of Eastern Canada." The Midway he nicknames "The Joy City," and, to use the French translation of his story, appearing in "Le Matin," Monte real), he refers to ice cream soda (practically unknown in England) as "congealed cream in aerated water."

From still another viewpoint are we permitted to see ourselves — this time from Los Angeles. A special writer of the Times in that city has been in Toronto recently. "Toronto's greatest aim," he says, "is to be a big seaport." He outlines the harbor developments.

Compared with Montreal, Toronto is described as "far more American." Montreal "is more sedate, more pompous, given to dignified trade."

People of the middle ages believed the best remedy for an aching tooth to be an application of serpent's skin steeped in vinegar.

DO ALL MY HOUSE WORK

Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly get about.

Cobourg, Ont.—"For many years I have had trouble with my nerves and have been in a general run down condition for some time. I could not do my work half of the time because of the trouble with my monthly sickness. I was told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by a friend and advised to try it. It has done me good, and I strongly recommend it. Since I have taken it I have been able to do all my own work, and I also know friends who have found it good. You can use these facts in testimonial."—Mrs. ELLEN FLATTERS, Box 761, Cobourg, Ont.

Why will women continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For forty years this good old fashioned root and herb remedy, which contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Was Seriously Injured.

On Monday last D. Floyd, Tamworth, met with a painful accident when lifting a heavy box in his store, causing such injuries that Dr. Boyce, Kingston, found it necessary to perform an operation immediately to save his life. Although Mr. Floyd is still seriously indisposed his condition is much improved. During the last month Mr. Floyd has been very busy decorating and moving his store preparatory to the Christmas trade. It is very unfortunate that he should have met with this accident at this particular time of the year, but we hope that his injury will prove to be less serious than at first supposed, and that he will soon be able to again direct the business of his store.

Dr. R. Bruce Taylor Addresses Historical Society To-night.

Samuel Pepys was the son of a London tailor and lived in the seventeenth century. At the early age of 27 he became Clerk of the Privy-Seal and Clerk of the "Acts of the Navy." He was an important figure in the social and political life of his day. His greatest contribution to history was his diary which was not published until 120 years after his death and is one of the most remarkable books of the English language. In it he records the great events of his time, interspersed with comments upon his domestic and personal affairs. No author has given us a more faithful picture of the inner life of the men and women of that period. To-night Dr. Taylor, the principal of Queen's University, is going to address the Historical Society upon this diary. The subject in his hands is sure to be interesting and instructive. No admisson fee will be charged and all who take pleasure in hearing a scholarly address will be welcome.

Motor Licenses.

Increased license fees will be charged owners of motor cars by the Department of Public Works next year, when Hon. F. G. Biggs, minister of public works, hopes to increase the revenue of the province from this source by $750,000. The revenue this year amounted to more than $2,000,000.

"As the automobiles use the roads most," Hon. Mr. Biggs said, "we feel that they should pay their share of the cost of the highways."

The number of cylinders in automobile engines is taken into account by the new measures, which was never done before.

The fee for passenger cars of 25 horsepower or less will range from $13 to $20. The present fee is $10.

For passenger cars of 25 to 35 horsepower the fee will range from $15 to $35. The present fee is $15.

Fees of 50 horsepower or over will be from $30 to $40. The present fee is $30.

The smallest motor truck, which now pays $10, will be $13. Trailers, which at present pay nothing, will be charged from $2 to $5.

Electric passenger vehicles will be increased from $10 to $15.

Provincial Highway.

Last week the machinery used during the season on the Provincial highway was brought to Napanee and put in winter quarters at the fair grounds. During the season just passed the roads leading east and west from Napanee have been improved wonderfully. An enormous amount of work has been done on the first three miles of the Deseronto road and the portion finished is certainly a creditable piece of work. On the York road a splendid stretch of road has been completed to Storms' Corners and further sections nearer Kingston. The Provincial Engineer, Mr. Noonan, is to be complimented on the excellent progress made on the Provincial Highways under his charge this summer. At the present time work is going on at Roblin's hill, taking out rock, which is being drawn to the Deseronto road to be used on that road next spring.

Forged Endorsation on Cheque.

John E. Woodcock Tamworth, appeared before Magistrate Rankin, on Monday morning, charged with forging the endorsation on a cheque. The cheque in question was one issued by the Treasurer of the County of Lennox and Addington to County Road Superintendent, T. V. Anderson, and by him endorsed over to J. E. Woodcock, a saw-mill owner whose post office is Tamworth. The letter was taken from Tamworth post office by some person to J. E. Woodcock, who cashed the cheque at Deseronto. The forgery was discovered when the owner of the cheque came to Napanee to enquire why his cheque had not been forwarded, and found that it had been taken up and cashed by another party. The amount of the cheque was about $250.00. The prisoner was remanded for a week.

Danger of Fire in Decorations.

Fire Chief F. J. Vanalstine has received the following from the Fire Underwriters' Association in reference to Xmas decorations: Following our usual custom at this season of the year, I beg to call your attention to the dangers to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of year. The use of Christmas trees, evergreens, festoons and other inflammable materials such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, and the like, especially in connection with electric and other lighting systems, is decidedly an increase of fire hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe. The Statutory Conditions of your insurance policy read in part as follows: "Any change material to the risk, and within the control or knowledge of the assured, shall avoid the policy as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the Company or its local agent." In addition to the danger to property from the displays referred to, the danger to life in crowded stores or places of meeting, by reason of a panic occasioned by fire, even though it be small and easily controlled, is so great that the Underwriters, who have made a study of such hazards, would fail in their duty should they not give this warning.

TORONTO MAN HAS GAINED 37 POUNDS

Robert Moffat Says Taniac Has Put Him Back On His Feet Feeling Fine.

"Taniac has not only put me back on my feet so I can work every day, but has actually built me up thirty-seven pounds in weight," said Robert Moffit, 33 Hamilton St., Toronto, Ont., a well-known employee of Bennett & Wright.

"I had an attack of influenza nearly two years ago which left me in a very weak and run-down condition. My energy was completely gone, I had no appetite and could scarcely eat enough to keep me alive, to say nothing of building up my strength.

"I was so nervous and weak I could hardly get around, and for weeks I couldn't do a bit of work. I often got so dizzy I would fall if I attempted to walk, and it seemed that I was getting worse every day in spite of all the medicine I had taken.

"But Taniac brought about a great change. My appetite is so good now I eat like a wood chopper, and my nerves are as steady as can be. The dizziness and weakness is entirely gone, and, in fact, I'm feeling fine and working every day. I count myself lucky that I got Taniac, for I don't think I could have stood up under my troubles much longer. Taniac will always have a hearty recommendation from me."

Taniac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON. (advt.)

Endorsed by ministers, prominent doctors, federation of Women's Clubs, health authorities, society people and public speakers, such as, Rev. J. L. Gordon, pastor of First Congregational Church, Washington, D.C., Rev. H. Chandler, of the Second Presbyterian Church, Freeport, Ill., and Mrs. Louise Kahalenberg, chairman of Wisconsin Federation of Women's Clubs. If those ministers of the various churches who condemn "Open your Eyes," "The End of the Road" would preach to their congregations the immoral facts that lie before them and the pitfalls they endure, it would be the greatest tribute to the country and to mothers who allow their daughters to roam the streets after 11 p.m. at night. If the christian city of Toronto can show these pictures to packed houses in various theatres throughout the city for 35 weeks, surely Napanee people would reap a benefit by it if they would see it. If this picture was not clean and educational the Board of Censors, which is made up of the best ministers and business men in the country, certainly would not allow these pictures to be shown to the public of Canada or the United States, both civilized countries, realizing the dangers that lie before their sons and daughters.

Preachers, whoever you may be, it is your duty to preach about these subjects and learn about others. If the Government, who passed these pictures did not allow anyone under 16 years of age to see them why was it announced in papers and heralds distributed about the cities and towns. See "Open Your Eyes" at the Strand on Monday and Tuesday, December 20th and 21st.

We extend a hearty welcome to ministers to see this and then pass their opinion after it is shown and not before.

U. F. O. NEWS AND VIEWS

In giving evidence before the Tariff Commission in Toronto, a few days ago, Mr. W. J. Morrison furnished statistics regarding the cost of clearing and equipping his father's farm. His father paid $5.00 per acre for 100 acres of bush land. For chopping he paid $10 an acre; for logging $10, and for stumping $30 an acre. The barn, which cost $2000 is a charge of $20 per acre on the land. The house, which also cost $2000 is another charge of $20 per acre. Fencing cost $3 per acre; drains $5; the orchard $4. This makes a total outlay of $100 per acre, or $10,000 to buy, clear and equip the 100-acre farm.

Mr. Morrison declared that he was willing to sell the 100 acres with house, barn, orchard, fences, drains, etc., for $6,000, and yet he could not get that sum from any purchaser.

In other words this shows that while it cost $10,000 to put this farm in shape, the owner to-day cannot get very much more than half that sum for it. It either means that the land is worth nothing or else the barn house, fences, orchards and labor put on the farm was so much effort thrown away. Could we have any more striking illustration of the decadences of an industry than that furnished by Mr. Morrison's farm—a case typical of thousands and thousands of other farms throughout this province?—Farmer's Sun.

It is not often that the farmer's of this district are privileged to listen to some phases of the farmer's viewpoint presented in as unbiased and fair a spirit as was done at "The District Dairy Meeting," held in Odessa on Dec. 8th. Especially might these remarks apply to the address delivered by Mr. Stonehouse, President of the National Dairy Council and President of the Toronto Milk Producers' Association.

That Mr. Stonehouse is able to speak with a broad intelligence upon all problems affecting the practical farmer, may be inferred from the fact that the late Food Controller, Mr. Hanna, picked Mr. Stonehouse to serve as a member of the Commission which sat at Ottawa during the most critical years of the war.

Referring to conditions which hampered his own services as a Commissioner, Mr. Stonehouse said that the attitude of all other members of that body toward the prices of farm produce, had been "How can we keep prices down?" Almost never did those members of the commission, who were unacquainted with farm conditions, give attention to the justice of the question: "How much does it cost the farmer to produce?" Naturally, in such a position, Mr. Stonehouse was enabled to discern the manner in which the needs of the farmer had been overlooked whenever these needs clash in the least degree in any way with the demands of any other industry. To show how Big Interests accomplished their ends he pointed out that at a time when all other prices were going down the freight rates on coal were actually doubled to the peak. The railroads had been able to bring about such satisfactory results for themselves because they have brilliant men employed, ever in touch with the Government, men who can make black look white. On the other hand, farming has been disregarded and neglected by legislators, because up till late years no organized effort has ever been able to analyze the farmers' troubles, setting them before the representatives of the people in an intelligent light and bringing pressure enough to bear to affect their remedy.

The lamentable state that agriculture is in, when compared to other industries, may be to some extent realized when we ask ourselves "What does it cost to produce any farm product?"

To ascertain the cost of producing any commodity has never been a means of affording the farmer a basis on which to reckon his selling price. The prices which he receives for his produce, almost without exception, have no relation to what it cost him to produce them. We have always been working back from the final selling-price of the product produced on the farm, deducting from it as we go back, the profit of the retailer, the wage of the hauler and carter and the cost and profit of freighting and storing, pruning and deducting as we go, until we reach at last, the farmer who originally produced it. He takes whatever is left, whatever all these other layers of activity have seen fit to leave him regardless of how much it might have cost the farmer to produce it.

That is the cause of much of the uncertainty involved in the farming business. "We should be working the other way," declared Mr. Stonehouse. "The farmer has no more right to contribute his labor and time and investment toward the production of a commodity and receive far less than it is worth, than has any other business man. The farmer, like any other man, has a right to reckon into the price of his product whatever it cost him in labor and capital."

MOSCOW

On Friday December 10th, Mr. and Mrs. Morley Huffman held a reception on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, and a large number of friends were entertained.

On Saturday, December 11th, Mrs. Wilfred Huffman passed away at the Kingston General Hospital after a lingering illness. The body was brought to her home at Moscow, and the funeral service was held at the Methodist church, Tuesday, December 14th, at 10.30 a.m.

Mrs. E. VanLuven is visiting her son at Kingston.

Mrs. Hicks, Sydenham, and Miss Florence Huffman are at M. Huffman's.

FARM HELP

Owing to unemployment in centres of population there are many men now available for farm work. A large number of these men have had farm experience and their services are now available at moderate wages with board. Farmers who can usefully employ one or two of these men at this time will be rendering a service to the community as well as to themselves. Many farmers have repairs and other odd jobs which have been put off for years on account of the high cost of labor. This might be a good time to get caught up with work of this nature.

Farmers desiring help please communicate with your local representative and state the nature of the work and wages you are willing to pay.

Captured Some Whiskey.

On Wednesday a couple of Kingston men were in Napanee and during the afternoon it was found they were trying to dispose of some whiskey. In the evening License Inspector Exley met the men and they offered to sell him the whiskey. While Mr. Exley was concluding his purchase Chief Barrett appeared on the scene by appointment and the men immediately got wise and pulling their revolvers on Exley and jumping into their car, speeded away. Chief Barrett succeeded in getting on the running board of the car, but was thrown off as the car whizzed around the turn onto the Kingston road. A telephone message to Kingston however, secured the men just as they arrived at their home in Kingston. Three 5 gallon demijohns, two of whiskey and one of water, were secured behind Mr. McFarlane's barn, South Napanee. The men, when arrested gave their names as Geo. Stockbridge and Elmer Robinson. Stockbridge claims he was on the staff of Rev. Spracklin for some time. The men appeared in Police Court on Thursday afternoon. When the demijohns were opened it was found that a small rubber sack had been cemented to the under side of each cork and filled with whiskey. A hole bored in the cork allowed the whiskey to be sampled. The balance of the contents was simply water. The case was adjourned.

COUNTY COUNCIL

The County Council met in special session in the Council Chamber in the Court House, on Saturday last. Members all present excepting Messrs. Rogers and Loyst. Mr. Miller presented a by-law to borrow $20,000 to cover this year's overdraft in the bank, which was put through its various stages and finally passed.

The Clerk laid before council a copy of a proposed amendment to the Municipal Act re Public Highways, relieving municipalities from any damage claims for accidents on highways where the travelled part of the highway is in reasonable repair. The travelled part of the highway shall not include any open ditch or drain, side slope or curb, nor any part of what is commonly known as the road side. The Council approved of the amendment and suggested an addition requiring persons claiming damages to prove that the municipality had been notified that the road was out of repair at least 10 days previous to the accident.

Communications from Deputy Minister of Education and Secretary of Tamworth Continuation School were read and laid on the table.

The following accounts were ordered paid: Hydro Electric, $1.05; J. L. Boyes, 95c.; Picton Collegiate Institute, $48.76.

On motion Adolphustown, Conway, Maple Leaf, Enterprise and Amherst Island Women's Institutes were each paid a grant of $15.00.

A communication from the governors of the Kingston General Hospital re ward patients, was laid on the table until the January session.

Tamworth Continuation School Reading, $1552.70, was ordered paid in January.

Mr. Tumdon presented the report of the special committee on balancing road accounts between Lennox and Addington and Hastings, showing a balance due Hastings County of $198.86.

Report adopted and balance ordered paid to balance accounts to date.

The following accounts were ordered paid: A. S. Ward $3.05, chargeable Adolphustown road fund; County Clerk contingencies, $22.80; an account of J. F. E. Rogers re death of Ellen Young, $81.15, was referred to Board of Audit.

On motion the county road superintendent was requested to have ditch on Belleville road, near Painter's farm, cleaned.

On motion the case of Mrs. Wm. Alcombrack and her child-ren was left in the hands of Reeve Graham to work in conjunction with Chief Barrett.

On motion the Warden was given the usual grant of $25.00.

On motion the Council at its final session takes great pleasure in recording in its minutes its thanks to our worthy Warden, Mr. Adams, for the certeous and impartial discharge of his duties in the chair. We trust he will continue in public life and may he be long spared to lend his valuable assistance to his own municipality and to the county generally. Carried unanimously and the council sang "For he is a Jolly Good Fellow."

Minutes were here read and confirmed and council adjourned sine die by singing "God Save the King."

How far could he count on them? To the last penny, perhaps, and literally. Their jobs would hold them to him in spite of Brousseau. But so long as their wages were forthcoming. Probably nine-tenths of them resented his presence in their country. His victory over Black Pierre had raised him in their estimation; they might hate him instead of despising him, but that was all. He could count on the devotion and faithfulness of perhaps one man besides Lafe Connell—little Baptiste.

The gang was hard at work below the dam, strengthening the structure of the boom. Riviere Rocheuse, pouring down from the foothills of the Laurentians, speeds with great force through the gorge above St. Boniface, widens opposite the settlement, and, scattering its waters there, shoots straight as a dart over the broken cliff into the gulf.

If, when the jam was broken, the pressure of the great mass of logs proved too strong for the boom, instead of passing into the flume they would pour over the cataract into the St. Lawrence, where their retrieval would be impossible. Such an accident had happened on a small scale once before. If it should happen now the loss would end all Hilary's hopes.

He was glad Baptiste had seen this. Hilary searched for the figure of the little timekeeper and general utility man, but failed to find it.

He ascended the hill beside the rushing cataract. He was crossing the waste land where the logs and tin cans were strewn when he saw Jean-Marie. The little man was engaged in earnest conversation with Black Pierre behind a shed. Black Pierre seemed to be protesting vigorously.

The presence of the man beside Baptiste came to Hilary with a shock. Without changing his pace he advanced toward them, in his mind repeating Lafe's advice over and over.

He was still inwardly quivering, yet trying to appear unconcerned, when the two perceived him. Pierre turned toward him with a scowl on his bruised face. His eyes were blackened, and he looked the incarnation of malignancy.

He spoke to Baptiste quickly, and to Hilary's surprise Baptiste, without acknowledging his presence, walked slowly away with him. Baptiste's sudden departure puzzled Hilary a good deal at the time, and much more afterward.

CHAPTER V.

Marie Dupont.

Lafe was as despondent as Hilary over Leblanc's treachery. Hilary had only one cause for satisfaction in the situation, and that was a purely personal one. He was glad that Leblanc's cancellation of the contract had left the Chateau grounds immune, and so had neutralized Brousseau's first move in the campaign.

What galled him was the reflection that in this fight which Brousseau had thrust upon him he was fighting Madeleine too. He shrank from the thought of Madeleine Rosny as Brousseau's wife; he tried to think of her as sacrificing herself for her father's sake. But this picture would not hold together; she was most evidently acquainted with Brousseau's designs, and approved of them.

On the day after the interview with Leblanc a new development occurred. Lafe, who had been grumbling all day, came into the office and flung down his hat in utter dejection.

"Something new?" asked Hilary.

"There's talk of a strike," said Lafe in disgust. "Brousseau has had his men at work among 'em, and they're saying that you're keeping wages down, and that Brousseau would give two dollars a day if you would."

"He wants to get into my capital, eh?"

"It's just one way of hitting us. I tell you, Mr. Askew, it's a tough job we've taken on. You know these men ain't got sense. Simeon Duval has been handing out free drinks in that shebeen of his at St. Marie, and telling them what a hard master you are, and they're just swallowing it."

"We'll face that trouble when it develops," answered Hilary.

But Hilary did some hard thinking, and it settled about Dupont. If Brousseau could buy out Dupont he was finished; he could never get a lumber schooner that year, and he must get out some shipments before navigation closed. He decided to appeal to Father Lucien to help him out in this difficulty.

But Father Lucien forestalled him with a visit that evening. He was avowedly surprised by the warmth of his welcome, heard Hilary attentively, and at once volunteered to assist him. "But there will be no trouble, monsieur," he said. "Captain Dupont is independent, and he does not love the Sieur Marie overmuch."

"Father Lucien," said Hilary, "I was going to have a talk with you later about certain things that are objectionable in the liquor trade, for instance."

Father Lucien stopped and thumped his stick upon the chipstrewn sand. "Now that is exactly what was in my mind when I started out to see you today, Monsieur Askew," he answered. "They are bad people over at Ste. Marie, and they are making St. Boniface as bad as they are. They laugh at me when I speak to them. It is bad; but it cannot go on. Monsieur Askew, as I said to you the day I see you, I hope we shall be friends. Now I know we shall be, and, please God, we shall at least keep the brandy out of St. Boniface."

They stopped and shook hands upon their compact, and then went on together, past the straggling outskirts of the village, beyond the wharf, until they reached Dupont's cottage.

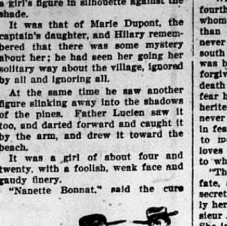
The cure tapped at the door. Within Hilary could hear the murmur of voices, which suddenly ceased. Then there came the splutter of a match, and the flame of a lamp. Hilary saw a girl's figure in silhouette against the shade.

It was that of Marie Dupont, the captain's daughter, and Hilary remembered that there was some mystery about her; he had seen her going her solitary way about the village, ignored by all and ignoring all.

At the same time he saw another figure slinking away into the shadows of the pines. Father Lucien saw it too, and darted forward and caught it by the arm, and drew it toward the beach.

It was a girl of about four and twenty, with a foolish, weak face and gaudy finery.

"Nanette Bonnat," said the cure



"Nanette Bonnat," Said the Cure Very Sternly, "How Often Have I Forbidden Thee to Come Here?"

very sternly, "how often have I forbidden thee to come here?"

"Let me go!" cried the girl, whimpering and struggling.

The door opened and Marie Dupont stood on the threshold. The flickering light of the lamp within fell on her face, illuminating one side and leaving the other half in shadow. The face was pretty, but sad, embittered, and rather hard. The cure, still holding Nanette by the arms, turned toward Marie.

"So my instructions count for nothing!" he said angrily.

"Well, why should she not, come here, Monsieur Tessier?" demanded Marie Dupont. "Have I so many friends in St. Boniface that I should turn from those few I have? In Ste. Marie they are glad to see me. Is it so wrong that I should go there with my friend to dance sometimes, when the doors of St. Boniface are closed to me?"

The ringing scorn in her voice was characteristic of some latent strength. She seemed to Hilary like one who has been hammered into strength upon the anvil of life.

Father Lucien released Nanette. "There, run along," he said, with pity in his voice. "Do not come here again, Nanette." He made a swift sign over her. "God be with thee, Nanette," he said gently.

The girl fled from him, sobbing, and Hilary could hear her sobs after she had been hidden by the pines.

"Where is thy father?" asked the cure.

"He has gone to the store," faltered the girl. "Monsieur Tessier—"

"I shall say nothing," answered Father Lucien. "But do not let this happen again, Marie," he continued, "thou hast won the love of, a good man."

Her face hardened, and she looked sullenly at the priest.

"A girl should think long before refusing a good man who loves her."

She cast her eyes down; and there was the incarnation of rebellious stubbornness in the rigid figure.

The captain's steps were heard, crushing the wood chips into the shingle. The old man came quickly forward into the arc of lamplight; quickly, as if he feared the realization of some terror gnawing at his heart. For a moment Hilary saw the pale gray eyes with the same menace upon his own. Then Dupont knew him.

"Bonsoir, Monsieur Askew," he said, extending his hand.

He opened the cottage door, but the cure did not enter.

"Captain Dupont," he said, "there has been trouble between Monsieur Askew here and Monsieur Morris."

"I have heard of it," replied the captain.

"Ask him if he is willing to accept his orders from me," said Hilary.

The cure translated, and the captain answered him, stroking his gray beard and speaking with slow emphasis.

"It is all right," said Father Lucien finally. "Captain Dupont takes his freight where he finds it. He takes from your company in accordance with his contract. He will not break it. If Brousseau refuses him freight he can pick up all he needs on the south shore. You can rely on him."

Hilary felt deeply satisfied. If the captain was staunch, not Morris nor Brousseau nor all his men should prevent him from getting out a record cutting before navigation closed.

"Tell Dupont we'll keep him busy," Hilary said.

When he was with Father Lucien upon their homeward way he asked him a question about a matter that had puzzled him.

"Why does Dupont look at me as if I were his mortal enemy?" he asked.

"Ah, Monsieur Askew," said the cure, stopping to thump his stick upon the shingle, "there is a story there. So he looks at every man when first he meets him. He fears for the girl Marie—and unfortunately he is right in his fears. For she has her mother's nature.

"It was many years ago, nearly twenty, I think, and before I came here, when Capt. Jules Dupont was a fisherman in St. Boniface. He was married to Marie Letellier, who was much younger than he, and gay and thoughtless. People said it was an ill-made match; but she loved him, and they were happy.

"When he left his young bride to go sealing off Newfoundland the tongues wagged, but he trusted her, and when he returned there was the child Marie, and a warm welcome. So three years passed.

"When Jules Dupont returned the fourth year his wife was gone. With whom? Nobody knew. I know more than anyone in St. Boniface, but I never knew. Some wanderer from the south shore; and six months later she was back with the child, pleading for forgiveness. He sheltered her until her death soon afterward. Since then his fear has been that Marie will have inherited the mother's nature. He never makes a voyage but he returns in fear and haste. And he wishes her to marry Jean-Marie Baptiste, who loves her—but you have seen tonight to what her mind is turning.

"The women recall her mother's fate, and their dislike has made her secretive and solitary. And it is lonely here, and Ste. Marie-so-near. Monsieur Askew, you saw the girl Nanette. She is from St. Joseph, of decent parents, who mourn for her. She was lured from her home to Ste. Marie, and I have fears that some one is using her as a tool to get the girl Marie Dupont into his clutches. But what can I do save watch and wait?

"Therefore, Monsieur Askew," continued Father Lucien, much agitated. "I implore you to prevent this evil from spreading to St. Boniface. It is Brousseau who debauches these poor people there. It is he who is responsible for all this evil. He cares nothing for the people, so long as he wields their votes for his creature in the parliament at Quebec. And this, monsieur, was chiefly the cause of my visit to you tonight, to urge you to keep the brandy and the dance halls out of St. Boniface, for I hear it being said that one of the Duvals boasts he will open a dance hall there."

"No brandy shall be sold on the St. Boniface property, Father Lucien."

"I am glad, monsieur," answered the cure. "But Simeon Duval and his brother Louis boast of Brousseau's protection, and they are dangerous men."

"You have my promise," said Hilary, "that they shall not sell liquor in St. Boniface. And by heaven I'll smash any man who tries to corrupt my people!" he added, with a vehemence that surprised himself.

Hilary slept poorly that night. Trouble seemed to be thickening about him. Had he, indeed, the power to handle these wild people whose very tongue he could hardly understand?

Then, out of the darkness, there rose, in vivid portrayal, the face of Madeleine Rosny. He admitted now how much she meant to him, enough to make any venture worth the while. He thought of their last meeting; and in spite of it he dared to dream of a happier one to come.

Before he fell asleep he had decided to go to Quebec and try to secure some jobber to take over Leblanc's lease. At the same time he would look up the land records and get an accurate idea of the extent of the timber limits.

Characteristically, he put his plan into practice two days later, when the down boat arrived, instructing Lafe to hold up the dynamiting till his return. Lafe saw him off, and by the time he arrived on board before discovering that Morris had embarked at Ste. Marie. Hilary suspected him of having learned of his plan and spying on him. The two men eyed each other, but did not speak.

Hilary put up at the Frontenac and, having business with the customs office with reference to a shipment of machinery, a small matter requiring a refund, he called there, and was disgusted to see Morris coming out of the revenue department in conversation with the assistant chief.

He failed entirely in his attempts to get a jobber to sublease Leblanc's tract. There were plenty of small men willing to do so on the installment system, but none willing to risk an immediate investment on a territory with such a reputation as St. Boniface had unjustly acquired.

Hilary knew he had to thank Morris for that. He returned to St. Boniface next day with only one thing accomplished. He had seen the land map and ascertained that the upper reaches of Rocky river had been surveyed and that the creek was wholly on his own land. He found, too, with some surprise, that a large island out in the Gulf was part of the Rosny domain. It had not appeared on Morris' rough map.

Lafe, who met him at the wharf, looked worried.

"I'm glad you've come," he said, as they drove to the mill together. "Things were pretty bad on Saturday night."

"They're striking?"

"No, Mr. Askew. That's the brightest point in the situation. MacPherson, the foreman, tells me that it's called off. Brousseau's dropped that maneuver, for some reason of his own."

"What's the trouble, then?"

"I guess Brousseau's off on another tack, Mr. Askew. All the hands was over to Ste. Marie on Saturday night by special invitation from Simeon Duval, who owns the biggest dance hall there. There was free drinks for everybody, and the whole place was in an uproar till Sunday morning. Not a stroke of work has been done here till yesterday, which means a four-day week. The men are only just sobering up now.

"However, that ain't the worst, by a long sight. It's a sort of open secret that they're going to open up St. Boniface wide, and Simeon's—"

"You mean Simeon has dared to start one of his hells here while I was away?" cried Hilary angrily.

"Not yet," said Lafe. "There ain't no more liquor being sold here than usual—yet. But they're going to open up if they can. Simeon's brother Louis has rented that house by the old stables that Jean Baptiste used to occupy

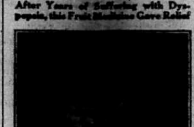
OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

After Years of Suffering with Dyspepsia, this Fruit Medicine Gave Relief



MLLE ANTOINETTE BOUCHER

917 Dorion St., Montreal.

"I am writing to tell you that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' for this remedy relieved me when I had abandoned all hope of ever recovering my health.

I suffered terribly with Dyspepsia. I had it for years and all the medicines I took did not do me any good.

I read something about 'Fruit-a-tives' being good for all Stomach Troubles and Disorders of Digestion so I tried them. After finishing a few boxes, I was entirely relieved of the Dyspepsia and my general health was restored.

I thank the great fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', for this wonderful relief."

last year before it began to go to pieces, and he's going to have a dance hall there and sell brandy—"

Hilary rapped out an oath. "Not if I have anything to say," he answered.

"Nor me," said Lafe. "The trouble is, where do we start in? We can't fight the whole town single-handed. I was wondering whether we couldn't wire the revenue people—"

"No!" said Hilary sharply. "We'll fight our own battles, Lafe."

Lafe subsided in a hurt sort of way. The evidences of demoralization were obvious in St. Boniface. The men were slow and surly, the women sullen, slatternly and hopeless-looking. It was clear that they had little hope Hilary could counter this new project. Hilary was aware of a feeling in the air, as if he was being tested. He saw furtive glances as he went by, he recognized reluctance in the sullen touch of the cap and the unsmiling faces, while not hostile, watched him with something like resentment, as if his attitude toward the Duval proposal was discounted beforehand.

Hilary had kept in his mind a plan of cutting along the bank of the river, without waiting for the snow. It seemed to him a feasible plan to fell right beside the water, and float the logs down, this requiring no teams to haul, a process impossible until the snow was deep. On the Saturday he went out afoot to survey the timber in the upper reaches. In order to get a clearer view, Hilary took the public road that ran along the eastern bank, within the Ste. Marie limits, and ascended to an elevation opposite the low-lying tract on the west side.

He had nearly reached the branch road which ran to toward Ste. Marie, along which Lafe and he had driven on that first morning, when he perceived Madeleine Rosny and Brousseau ahead of him, at the top of the rise. They seemed to be talking earnestly, and Hilary held back, unwilling to surprise them. Presently he saw Brousseau spur his horse and gallop away in the direction of Ste. Marie, while Madeleine came slowly toward him.

She saw him and turned her horse aside to let him pass. She had been crying, and there were traces of tears still on her cheeks. She would have waited for him to go by, her face averted, but Hilary placed his hand upon the horse's bridle.

"Let Me Go," She Said in a Low Tone.

"Mademoiselle Rosny—" he began.

"Let me go on," she said in a low tone.

"I want to speak to you. And if you are in trouble I want to help you."

She smiled wearily. "I am not in trouble, and if I were I should hardly ask your aid, Monsieur Askew," she answered. Then, with sudden vehemence, "Why did you come here?" she cried. "Why could you not have left St. Boniface alone, instead of stirring up hatred? Is it not enough that my father should have been compelled to sell your uncle our trees, without your coming here to exult over our shame?"

"I have not exulted, Mademoiselle Rosny; I am sorry."

"Take back your pity. We don't want it. What has Monsieur Brousseau done to you—or Mr. Morris?"

"Morris, since you inquire, has swindled me out of several thousand dollars' worth of lumber, Mademoiselle Rosny. As for Monsieur Brousseau, the trouble is of his own seeking."

"You went upon Monsieur Brousseau's land and quarreled with one of his workmen, and you ill-treated him shamefully, just because you are big and strong, and not afraid of a weaker man. And you and your hired men—our men who serve you—have taken Monsieur Brousseau's lumber, and you are going to sell it as your own. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, you outlaw!"

"You're altogether wrong, Mademoiselle Rosny," answered Hilary quietly. "The quarrels were none of them of my seeking. Monsieur Brousseau, who is quite capable of taking care of himself, lays claim to land and lumber which is not his. I suggest, Mademoiselle, that you have not shown sufficient cause for your hostility.

"I have done you no wrong," urged Hilary. "I have come here to take charge of a legacy which my uncle left me. It is all I have in the world. It has been my hope to make the task successful and, in succeeding, to consider my neighbors and help my employees. Is not this a case for our working amicably together, as you suggested in the case of Monsieur Brousseau? Come, Mademoiselle Rosny, let us forget our quarrel and be friends."

She did not take the hand that he extended, but she looked at him in wonder.

"You spoke of my good-will," she said presently, with a touch of mockery. "What is that to you? Surely my father's feeling toward you, which is mine, can have no power to help or injure you?"

"It means much to me, your good-will, Mademoiselle Rosny," said Hilary.

She leaned forward in her saddle. "Monsieur Askew," she said. "listen to me. If you value my good-will you shall have it on one condition."

"On any condition."

"That you leave St. Boniface."

"Except that," said Hilary.

"It is true that I grudge your your possession," resumed the girl hurriedly. "Believe me, I am not thinking of that. As you said, the money was paid, and the rights are yours. But this is no place for you, monsieur. I could esteem you and—and give you my good-will if you said 'I have made a mistake,' and went. Why do you stay here, to stir up trouble and agitate us all? What is it you want, that you will not take the value of your trees from Monsieur Brousseau and go?"

I have a natural objection to being driven out of my own property," said Hilary.

"It should never have been yours, Monsieur Brousseau wanted it, but my father refused."

She broke off in agitation. Hilary laid his hand lightly upon the rein, near her own.

"Mademoiselle Rosny," he urged, convinced that he was as agitated as she, "I want to ask you something. I do not want you to go to Ste. Marie. I said I wanted to help you. Perhaps I held no right, but I do not want you to go there. it is because I honor you, and—"

She was staring at him in greater distress. He hardly knew whether she understood.

"Monsieur Brousseau—" she began, half-choking.

"Forgive me, mademoiselle, but does he mean so much to you as that?"

She started and twitched the rein away. "You are insolent!" she cried. "How dare you question me or lay down the law to me? No, I have heard enough. Stay, then, Monsieur Askew, and cut down the trees that have been bought, and sell them; but do not presume to speak to me any more!"

She touched her horse with her spur, and the beast bounded away, almost flinging Hilary to the ground. Her face was flaming; yet, as she rode, Hilary could hear her sobbing again.

He was sure that Brousseau was the cause of her distress. He recalled Lafe's words to himself on the night of their first meeting. Brousseau's grasping hand was stretched forth not only on the seigniory but on its heiress—and he vowed that the battle between them should be fought out on this ground also.

CHAPTER VI.

Inside the Dance Hall.

It had been the general expectation that Louis Duval would open his saloon that evening. Hilary was aware that Louis and two assistants were engaged in carpentering behind the closed door of the shanty. However, evening came and the house remained closed. Furthermore, there was a general exodus toward Ste. Marie, and when the news came that Louis himself had gone it became clear that he had postponed his inauguration of the test of Hilary's authority, for reasons known best to himself, or perhaps to Brousseau.

Hilary came to the decision to ride over to Ste. Marie that night and see what was transpiring there. Lafe, to whom he confided his scheme, thought it risky, but, as he could not induce Hilary to change it, asked permission to accompany him and made him promise to avoid trouble.

It was about an hour after dark when they turned up from the beach into the main street which was the chief dance halls. Simeon Duval's place was working full blast, as were half a dozen more, and Hilary recognized numbers of his own men in route. Nobody appeared to notice them, however, and they reached Simeon's place unaccosted, and, standing upon the porch beside the door, looked in.

It was a large wooden building, within which a score of lumbermen were dancing, mostly with one another; but a few had women partners.

There was no pretense of secrecy in respect of the sale of liquor. Simeon Duval, whom Lafe indicated to Hilary, was a stoutish, middle-aged man in shirtsleeves, with pale blue eyes and a thin crop of reddish hair, turning gray. He wore spectacles, which gave him a strange, scholastic expression, and the arms beneath his upturned sleeves were a mass of fat and muscle. The interior was vilely hot, gusts of fetid air came rolling out with the tobacco smoke, and the din was deafening.

As the two stood there Hilary was astonished to see little Baptiste push past them and enter. His face was agitated, and he seemed to see nothing but his objective. He strode through the dancers toward one side of the room, where two girls were seated. Hilary had observed one of them decline several invitations to dance and drink, though apparently urged by the other; now he recognized them as Nanette and Marie Dupont.

Baptiste strode straight up to Marie and stood before her. Hilary could hear nothing, but he saw the little timekeeper gesticulating and apparently imploring her. He saw Marie shrug her shoulders and avert her face. Nanette was laughing, and two or three of the lumbermen nearby watched the little scene with amusement. Baptiste grew more vehement. Marie turned on him angrily.

Baptiste sprang at her, seized her by the sleeve of her dress, and tried to pull her from her seat. Hilary saw Nanette protesting angrily; he could not hear Baptiste's excited exclamations, but he heard faintly the scream that came from Marie's lips. At once there was a general uproar. Men rose from the group. Some of the lumbermen interfered. Baptiste turned upon them with menacing fists. The little man was beside himself with fury. Then Simeon came waddling down the room with his duckish shuffle, and took Baptiste by both arms. With slow but inexorable force he led him toward the door. It seemed almost as if Baptiste, struggling in vain and mouthing inarticulately, was in the grip of some machine, for the momentum of Simeon's movements compassed much more of bulk than of velocity. Amid the jeers of the crowd Baptiste was thrust from the door, and Simeon turned and waddled back into the room, where the dancing was in full swing once more.

Baptiste Sprang at Her, Seized Her by the Sleeve of Her Dress and Tried to Pull Her From Her Seat.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. RIGHT HOG IS NEEDED

PROBLEM OF SECURING GOOD BACON.

Lard Type of Swine Not Suited to Canadian Requirements — Westerners Report Experience—American Settlers Have Failed With Corn-fed Hogs In the Wheat Belt.

Hog-raisers would do well to study the case of the Western farmer. Last winter, when the extreme shortage of feed and the fear of a controlled market cast a cloud over the industry, thousands in the three Prairie Provinces sold out, even to their breeding sows. To-day hundreds of them are regretting this rash act. The new crop of coarse grains is turning out well, especially in the northern parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and the prospects of a drop in prices for these are apparent. But to many this will only add regret, for there is no stock to which to feed it. All over the country, writes a special correspondent of the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers, who is touring the West on a special enquiry, one hears of quite high prices being offered for brood sows, but they are not available.

To some extent the late heavy slaughter may be an advantage, if one is to look for the silver lining to a cloud. American settlers who came into the West in numbers during the war years brought with them a large number of the fat, lard type hogs, especially the Duroc-Jersey and the Poland-China. To a certain extent these have met the domestic demand, but they are wholly unsuitable for the export bacon trade. One of the reasons why hog-raising got into disfavor in the West in the last eighteen months is due to these types. The American breeder, transplanted to a northern climate, has been endeavoring—with an American type grown to the south, where climatic conditions make corn-growing far easier and corn-fed lard hogs are required by the markets—to grow hogs for Canadian requirements. The result has been failure. It could not be expected to be otherwise. But the outcome has been a black eye to the whole of the Canadian hog industry, regardless of the fact that the type and method have both been impossible under our conditions.

With an abundant crop of coarse grain there now seems to be every likelihood of a return to hog-raising; not, perhaps, on a great scale for a season, but it is inevitable in the long run. If only this imported notion about an unsuitable breed for our essentially export bacon trade can be up-rooted, the feed shortage out here may yet prove a blessing in disguise. The Provincial Governments, as well, of course, as the Dominion officials, are courageously preaching an extension of the Yorkshire and Berkshire breeds. Perhaps they could do nothing better in the West than a concentrated attack upon the lard type of hog, which is in every sense foreign to our Canadian trade needs.

Boys' and Girls' Club Work Emphasizes One of the Greatest Assets of Youth — Ambition — Club Girls Learning to Plant Gardens.

Clubs of Young People.

Boys' and girls' club work, club leaders say, has capitalized one of the biggest assets of youth—ambition. In every neighborhood and county where club work is carried on there are boys and girls who are making records that are significant, for they show a growing capacity for achievement as well as because of the amounts actually produced. Typical of many young folks in all parts of the United States is Irene Johnson of Blooming Prairie, Minn., whose garden club work may be summarized as follows:

1916—Won first prize in home town garden club, $5.

1917—Garden profits help buy Liberty bond; club garden champion for southern Minnesota; free trip to Minneapolis.

1918—Larger garden; half of proceeds spent for war savings stamps and half for clothing.

1919—Gardened to beat the H. C. of L. Crops included one bushel of fine seed corn grown in garden, valued at $7; canned large quantities of vegetables; first prize on all vegetables exhibited at local "achievement" event; prizes at county fair for vegetables and canning; total expense $4.65, net returns $53.88.

These figures should interest young Canadians who ought to be able to do as well.

The Farm Horse.

As showing that the day of the horse, as motive power on the farm is not entirely past, despite all claims for the increasing popularity of tractors and motor vehicles, the estimates made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, for 1919, as compared with the census of 1910, are interesting.

The 1919 census showed that there were in that year 19,832,000 horses on farms in the United States, while the estimates of the Department of Agriculture for January 1, 1920, showed 21,109,000 horses on farms — an increase of 1,276,000 horses in the decade. In addition to this the United States exported in the nine years ending June 30, 1919, 1,149,763 horses.

A national survey of tractors and motor trucks employed on U. S. farms, made in 1919, showed 200,000 tractors and 143,444 motor trucks. The report of the survey showed that the tractors displaced from 1 4-5 to 2 1-2 horses per farm where the tractors were owned.

Excuses for Severe Simplicity.

Excellent material and excellent lines are excuses for a suit's severe simplicity.

Short, Full Tunic.

Many evening gowns feature the short, full tunic.

Danger From New Diseases of Wheat.

Aside from rust and smut, Canadian wheat crops have been found remarkably free from destructive plant diseases. Recently, however, there have been discovered in the United States two new diseases, "flag smut" and "take all," about the presence of which there has been felt considerable alarm. Now up to the time of writing Canada has not been invaded by either of these new troubles. But growers should be ever on the lookout for these and any other obscure trouble with which their practice has not made them thoroughly familiar.

"Flag smut," so called because the smut occurs on the flags or leaves of wheat, is easily recognized by the long streak of impurity stripes running along the leaves. The affected plants also show a peculiar tangled and twisted appearance as if the leaves were wound around the stem. Any suspicious plant should be sent to the Division of Botany, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

"Take all," as the name implies, takes all, and is probably the most serious wheat disease known, with the exception of rust. In certain countries, indeed, it is the more serious, as is emphatically claimed by the practical grower as well as the scientific observer. The recognition in the field is not difficult. "Take all" is a root disease, spreading from below up the stem for about one to two inches, discoloring the stem dark brown. The affected plants may be pulled up very easily, their anchorages in the ground is very loose as compared to a sound plant. The affected plants turn yellow and finally die, taking straw and all. Both diseases are most likely conveyed by infected seed grain, hence it is most important to "nip these diseases in the bud" and report all suspicious cases at once. The use of foreign wheats for seed is cautioned against; particularly wheat from Australia is under suspicion.

Money In Geese.

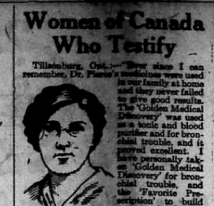
Although geese should receive their final fattening for market in a hurry, that is to say by being confined closely and fed heavily for two or three weeks, there is now a good chance to bring them along to a fair weight by turning them on the grain stubble. This means cheap feeding, and the exercise the birds will obtain in moving about to secure their feed and water will put them in just the right shape to make fast gains on the final crowding with corn or other rich feed.

Where geese are force-fed they become exceedingly fat, often weighing as much as 25 pounds. When in such condition their livers are often enormous, and will sell for $1 per pound where there is a demand for this particular part of the goose. Another source of considerable revenue from geese is the feathers, which are in growing demand and command high prices. About one pound of feathers can be plucked from a goose in a year. Feathers are ripe for plucking when the quills appear dry and do not contain blood.

Shallow Cultivation Best.

The Illinois station has conducted experiments that show the advantage of shallow cultivation of corn and also show that ordinary cultivation (about four times) gives practically the same results as frequent cultivation. Following are the results arrived at, showing the average yield in bushels for five years: Frequent cultivation, 68.6; ordinary cultivation, 68.5; shallow cultivation, 71.6; deep cultivation, 66.6.

Women of Canada Who Testify



Tillsonburg, Ont.—"For years since I can remember, Dr. Pierce's medicines were used in our family at home and they never failed to give good results. The 'Golden Medical Discovery' was used as a tonic and blood purifier and for bronchial trouble, and I proved excellent. I personally take an 'Golden Medical Discovery' for bronchial trouble, and the 'Favorite Prescription' to build me up when I was run-down and they both work very beneficial. Mother always used Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed for pain; it also was very good. I feel safe in recommending all of Dr. Pierce's medicines knowing them to be good."—MRS. CLIFFORD MITCHELL.

Central Butte, Sask.:—"I have used Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery for a number of years and am pleased to recommend it as a blood purifier. I know it has no equal as I used it for my boy for tuberculosis of the knee joint. My neighbors and friends were surprised with the results; in fact, I do not think he would be alive today had it not been for the 'Medical Discovery.' I also keep it on hand for coughs as it differs so from other cough medicines. Instead of upsetting the stomach as most cough syrups do it is good for the stomach. I only wish I had known about Dr. Pierce's medicines sooner."—MRS. PERCY WOOD.

When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth. Still more, you get a temperance medicine that contains not a drop of alcohol or narcotic of any kind. Long ago Dr. Pierce combined certain valuable vegetable ingredients—without the use of alcohol—so that his remedies always have been strictly temperance medicines.

WOMEN WEAR BRIGHT COLORS

New French Shade, "Brique," Especially Smart When Used With Black Trimming.

It is distinctly a season of many colors and women of fashion have apparently got away from the notion that there is something barbarian in the wearing of bright hues, notes a fashion writer. There is really just as much opportunity to show good taste in wearing bright colors as bad taste. To be sure, if you have no color sense, then you are safe in keeping to dull or neutral hues.

Henna as such may be a back number, but there is the tone that the French call "brique" that is gaining increasing place in plans for autumn clothes. Especially smart is this "brique" when used with black trimming.

Many red shades are in favor, and you will probably hear more of Venetian red as the season advances.

There is a fondness for combinations of light summer shades, especially in organdie or chiffon. Blue and pink, blue and yellow, certain shades of lavender with yellow or lavender with blue are all good. In some of the French evening frocks chiffon of three or four of the light pastel shades is caught together to form a shoulder ornament or a hip or skirt drapery.

Jade has been reported dead more than once, but it still seems to have enough life in it to reappear in some very interesting combinations with black or white. There are some striking black silks with jade green stripes, and some effective frocks have only just been brought out of jade green embroidered in white.

Gray, of course, is having things its own way in Paris. Often this is combined with pink in what might seem an insipid combination. Somehow it is used to appear very smart. Then it has been combined with trimming of black and red very effectively. This combination appeared once in a cloak of plain gray woollen material trimmed with other wool of black and red. Then again there was a costume consisting of a plaited gray silk skirt and a jacket made like a short Chinese mandarin coat of rich red silk embroidered in black.

STYLES IN NEW GOWNS IN PARIS

Silhouette to Remain Same as It Has Been for Some Time Past.

VARIOUS FORMS OF TRIMMING

Shapings of Necklines and Waistlines, Drapings of Skirts, Shaping of Bodices, Among Fine Points of Finished Outfit.

Two gowns—one from Lanvin and one from Worth—show something of the style aims of the coming season. Paris says that, with devious variations to prove the rule, the silhouette shall remain virtually the same as it has been for some time past. It is to the details of formation and construction that the artists in dress are bending the utmost of their talent. There seems to be no end, writes a fashion correspondent, to the new forms of trimming, the novel shapings of necklines and waistlines, the drapings of skirts, the shaping of bodices, the handling of lace and the general usage of all the fine points which go to make up a finished gown.

While the Parisians are generally considered to be at the lowest ebb of their art when handling the making of suits, still in the one which Worth has designed there is every sign of all that is to be desired. The skirt is long and full enough in its width to make it comfortable for walking purposes. The peplum exhibits a slightly more abundant tendency, which gives it the proper swing above the line of the skirt. The waistline is long, reaching toward the hips, and there it is further augmented by tucks that are interestingly grouped. The fur is not too lavishly used and still it serves to accentuate the line and to add to the color combination, which, in this instance, is an antique green velvety cloth with black fur. The sleeves are an interesting feature of this not strictly tailored suit, for they spread open slightly at the wrists and allow the trimming to take its way up the arm until it approaches the elbow.

Ideas of the French.

The French people believe, always, that a suit which deviates slightly from the strictly tailored variety is much better style than the one which adheres too closely to all of the masculine characteristics. They insist that it is, in the end, a more attractively feminine thing if it always keeps in mind the fact that it is to be worn by a woman. And surely their suits remain as practical as ours, which must be more closely fitted, more hardly tailored. In some ways they may be worn for a greater length of time, for the unevenness of their design allows some slight imperfections to exist without being too broadly visible.

Showing a new "Taillieur" by Worth. Fur serves to accentuate the line and add to color combination.

As for the Parisian idea of all that is lovely in woman's attire, there is the little Lanvin model for pertinent comparison. That has all the softness, transparency and grace that they consider essentials of a woman's gowning.

The materials are black taffeta and tulle, and the little flowers which are scattered carelessly over the surface of the tulle overdress are made of cleverly twisted pieces of the taffeta with golden centers. No, there is nothing decidedly new about this charmingly simple frock, but its character is fine and its tone is one of beauty—in all that the French seem to be demanding for a standard.

Much lace continues to be seen on the dresses that have been exhibited at the Parisian races, where all the style tendencies of the season to come are put forward. One of the newest dresses seen at this time had a foundation of figured silk made in chemise fashion, with quite short sleeves and a rounded neck. There was place over the back and a lace underskirt that showed for a space of about five inches beneath the silk hem of the gown. It was a graceful thing, with the straightest of silhouette lines, but with the airiness and floating quality that lace gives.

Chemise Dress Holds Own.

The chemise dress, indeed, holds its own in a most remarkable way. Those who are returning from Paris say that nothing else can be seen on the boulevards. Sometimes they are embroidered over every inch of the surface that shows, sometimes they are merely trimmed with inconspicuous though cleverly designed rows of embroidered stitching, sometimes the embroidery displays itself in solidly worked bands of bright colorings, and, again, the chemise frock is made of simple, plainly woven and plainly colored silk or satin that has nothing but its line —its artistic and studied line—to recommend it for more than passing attention. A favorite method of embroidering the chemise frock is to carry the stitchings (hand stitchings they must be to be right) from the hem of the gown to the hip line and then to allow the rest of the gown to remain plain and unadorned, with only a string belt to suggest the place where a waistline might be located.

Gown of taffeta and tulle, by Lanvin. Its character is fine and its tone is one of beauty.

The cape, or some variation of the cape, is still popular among the Parisians. The cuts of these capes are as diversified as the trimmings of the chemise frocks, but always they retain the same lines—straight, except for a place at the front where they are hugged about the figure. A few of the newer capes have sort of blousy tops with skirt section joined to them down about the legs or quite under the hips. These, with their collars of fur, or with furry edgings, are the most graceful of outer coverings.

Evening Frocks Are Draped.

Evening frocks continue to be draped and draped and then draped again. A Parisian designer recognizes no law in these her noblest works of art, but she regards the figure and what is best suited to it. Some of the results are more perfect than others; a few have positive marks of genius. The silhouette is straight—yes—but every now and then one sees a bow or a puff or a frill or a flounce jutting out at the side or at the back or at some other unexpected angle.

Many brocades are seen among the newest evening gowns, and these are draped always at a new angle and in a new way. Generally speaking, it is said that the skirts of evening gowns are longer, but here a strange breaking of the rule occurs, for many of them are long at one side and shorter than ever at the other, while others are so constructed that the front and back vie with each other in unevenness of length. For the brocades there is no eliminating. They are enough in themselves, and as the materials increase in beauty and richness, so do the designs, until the whole effect is something to wonder at. A draped evening gown is made of the heaviest of black satin and is held about the figure in sweeping curves. Then there are two long and flowing trains reaching far below the hem of the gown itself.

Lace Is Decidedly Popular.

Lace for evening gowns is quite the thing. A lace evening gown is made with tiers of flounces for the skirt, and with a low backed bacey bodice having only suggestions of short sack bacey sleeves. The lace is black and is made over black satin, which under the fine meshes somewhere about the bodice is folded, draped length of cloth of gold is arranged with subtle deftness. There is a lace train, which is attached at the rather high waistline and allowed to swing free of the rest of the frock until it sweeps for a matter of a foot or so upon the floor.

Lace and cloth of gold or cloth of silver is a very sumptuous and popular combination among the Parisians. The draping of lace over this shimmering metal foundation is charming, and nothing has ever been better suited to the purposes of evening wear.

The French hats of the season are again low and tight, hugging the head so that the least of the veil can show. After the general close and clinging lines of the hats have been established then they are subject to all sorts of ancies—going up into the air or out into the breeze on either side or down at back, with a long sweep of feather on over the lines of the neck and shoulders.

Labor Saver.

Cotton crepe can be used to keep down the ironing bill. For underwear it should be made up with rather heavy lace to look well, for if it is combined with some lace or embroidery which needs ironing to look its best, either the garment so made looks flimsy and unattractive or else it defeats its own purpose of making less work for the laundress. There is nothing more serviceable than cotton crepe in pink, brown or blue and white for children's rompers. Made with a little colored braid at the neck and wrists and belt, these rompers are pretty as well as practical.

Flannel Decorations.

Milady will decorate her fall blouses with flannel. A recent model is made of white georgette, and has a throw collar and bell sleeves of flannel. The very plain blouse has two rows of scallops near the waistline which are bound in color to match the scarf.

USE "DIAMOND DYES"

GOWNS DO CLING

Paris Evening Attire Has Narrow Fish-Tail Train.

Some Skirts Are Transparent and Worn Over Short and Rather Tight Slips.

Some of the Parisian designers, writes a Paris correspondent, are making evening gowns which cling to the form, giving something of a mermaid aspect, for in nearly all cases the evening gowns of today show narrow trains of fish-tail design.

In some cases these skirts are transparent and worn over short and rather tight slips made of silver or aluminum tissues. For young girls who go in a great deal for dancing, these latest models are ideal.

They are so quaint and yet so very becoming. One might suppose that the hoops, which are made of gilded or silvered wire, would interfere with one's comfort when dancing, but not at all. They are so cleverly arranged that they are almost flat front and back, while they jut out at either side. In fact, the hips are oval instead of being round. But then these are dance frocks for young girls. They look ridiculous on women who have left their youth behind.

For the latter—and I am not speaking of elderly women, only of those who are no longer in the "bud" stage —we have ideal evening dresses which are pinchy at the sides without being distinctly hooped.

Almost all the best of these models have remarkably plain corsages. This is an important note of the present season.

The skirt of this dress is almost ankle-length. "Almost, but not quite." This is the latest idea in the rue de la Paix. All through the summer the Paris dressmakers clung to the ultra short skirt. Our smartest actresses insisted on having models of this order —they would not accept anything else.

Nevertheless, those who were behind the scenes knew that the order had gone forth to add a few inches to the early winter models. I am of the opinion that we have to thank American women for this most happy change, for they have consistently advocated ankle-length costumes. In Paris we have not yet reached this extract length, but we are approaching it slowly.

Autumn model in topaz yellow taffeta, ochre lace and purple-and-silver glace tissue ribbon.

VEIL THE TARNISHED LACE

Beautiful Effects May Be Gained; Two Fabrics May Be Attractively Used Together.

Just because it is impossible to restore tarnished gold or silver lace to its original glistening brightness, do not despair, for really beautiful effects may be gained by veiling the tarnished lace with georgette crepe, fine net, gauze, chiffon, or tulle. If desired, two of the veiling fabrics may be used together.

Experiment with various samples and you will easily discover just the combination you wish.

Tarnished silver lace veiled in pale rose or blue chiffon that is in turn veiled in smoke gray or taupe gauze may be fashioned into an exquisite costume blouse to accompany a taupe or gray suit. Or the dull lace may be veiled in black georgette crepe to give a rich effect.

Of course, very light colored veiling cannot be used alone over such lace, but must be veiled with a darker shade to keep the foundation lace from appearing dingy.

Tarnished gold lace veils look especially well in a clear dark blue, though cinnamon or woods brown gives an equally pleasing effect, and purple offers possibilities.

Plain Talks -- No. 1

DEAR PEOPLE :—

Never in our wildest dreams have we ever thought of moving to Kaladar to start a factory making mouse traps, but if ever we do the rest of the manufacturers will be obliged to sit up and take notice, for, what ever we do we do right, and sensible people will go a little out of their way for something better.

Any time you're up town give us a call. We're sociable and have a nice comfortable seat where you can sit a while. Supposing you are folks, like ourselves, and can boast of but one pair of shoes, just slip them off and say "half soles." We'll hand you them back in a few minutes' time like new, for we are thoroughly experienced and can make old footwear just beg for mercy.

Tho' the (spirit) hath departed,
(Soles) can still be fixed ;
Don't bring us all your good jobs
For we like all things mixed.

We even used to mix our drinks,
And sampled lots of booze ;
But now, dear people, all we know
Is how to fix up shoes.

There's others just as good, no doubt,
But better workers, few,
So bring along an old pair,
We'll send them home like new.

Help us in thought in word, in deed,
Each hour on earth we live."

A BIBLE LOVER.

In order to assist in the prompt and satisfactory administration of Justice the Attorney General is arranging to place a Provincial constable in the principal towns of the Province under the direction of the Crown Attorney. It will be the duty of this officer to attend under the direction of the Crown Attorney to police work in connection with all parts of the county where there is no police force. In cities and towns having a force which it is the duty of the Provincial officer's duty to give what assistance is necessary, he will not relieve the local police of their duty or interfere with their activities. It will be his duty to enforce the Criminal Code, the Ontario Temperance Act and any provincial statutes, but not, of course, Municipal by-laws, which of necessity, will be left to the Municipal authorities. It is hoped that the appointment of these officers will result in a greatly improved administration of justice, especially in the rural districts. All complaints of criminal offences, offences against sections of the O. T. A., or offences against other provincial statutes should be made to the Crown Attorney who is responsible for the enforcement of the law in this county.

Mayor Feeds the Council.

Following the concluding meeting of the town council of 1920, Mayor Robinson, who has definitely decided to retire from the council, invited the members of the council, the officials and press to a lunch at Caton's restaurant. At the conclusion of the lunch Town Clerk Mr. W. A. Grange, expressed the regret of the town officials in Mr. Robinson's retirement from the council and moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Mayor for his past services to the council and community. Reeve Graham, in seconding the motion commended Mayor Robinson's work as leader of the council and his zeal in helping in the accomplishment of the work of the council for the benefit of the town.

Councillor Boyes expressed his regret at Mr. Robinson's decision to retire and expressed the hope that good candidates will be chosen to fill the vacancies in the council.

Dr. Cowan, M. O. H., Councillors Paul, Ming and Roblin, Ex-Mayor Steacy and the representatives of the press all added their tribute to Mr. Robinson's untiring energy during his term of office to further the best interests of Napanee and all expressed the hope that the new council will be composed of business men who will be able and willing to handle the business of the town satisfactorily during the next couple of years, as many large problems have to be faced by the next council.

FURS AT ROBINSON'S

Utmost in Quality and Style.
Prices are shorn from all extravagance.

Prices on raw furs have been lowered for some reason, possibly on account of the mild weather, possibly because they were too high, for some reason manufacturers have notified us that they can secure raw skins for less money. In some instances, in some lines these reductions have been as large as twenty-five per cent.

HERE'S HOW WE STAND. We bought our furs when furs could be bought to advantage this season. The manufacturers are some of the largest in Canada. Their tremendous buying powers enabled them to get rock bottom prices. We bought our stocks at their lowest figures. As we do not make our living the year round out of furs, we are able to mark them at a smaller rate of profit.

On October 1st, this year we had, we believe, the lowest prices on furs in Ontario.

Now on every piece of fur we have stupendous reductions.

Fur muffs and fur neck pieces are reduced 33 1-3 per cent. from these prices on October 1st.

Fur coats are reduced as much as $100.00 and $144.00.

CHOOSE A FUR COAT FOR HER XMAS PRESENT FROM THESE.

One only Ladies' Hudson Seal Coat (Dyed Muskrat) made from the very finest of skins obtainable. Every skin has been carefully chosen before being used. This garment is trimmed with Alaska Sable on collar and cuffs. Beautifully lined. Regular $544.00 value for $398.00.

In the same quality of luxurious skins is another coat featuring in all seal shawl collar. This very handsome model is now priced $298.00. Former price was $440.00.

Second only to Hudson Seal coats are these coats of French Seal. They are made of splendid wearing skins of unusual durability. You will find them cut on full, generous lines, large roomy coats with snug fitting collars. Three sizes in these coats. Regular $300.00 values for $198.00.

In the same class of high grade French Seal coats are two wonderful garments that are trimmed with Australian Opossum on collar and cuffs. These coats measure 36 inches long and are decidedly attractive in appearance. Regular $413.00 values for $285.00.

In lower priced coats we are featuring Mink Marmot Coats. These coats are strong, durable, attractive coats that will render you good faithful service. Priced to clear at $119, $125.00 and $135.00.
